HE zoning plan of the City Plan Commission, as it applies to the use of buildings to be erected in St. Louis in the future, was made public yesterday. It is a tentative plan, and has not yet been placed in the form of an ordinance. (The following statement, issued by the Committee on Public Information on the Authority of the Gas Defense Service, Medical Department of the United States Army, is especially interesting in view of the gassing of over 70 American troops, with several fatalities, in the sector northeast of Toul last Tuesday.)

HE United States Army is being prepared to meet the gas attacks of the enemy, the means of protection having been devised by the Gas Defense Service, of the Medical Department, which comprises about 100 officers and approximately 600 enlisted men.

The two principal factors in gas defense are effective masks and thorough training of soldiers in the use of masks and various methods of avoiding contact with poisonous vapors.

Experts who have been sent to this country by the allied government have pronounced the present American masks the most efficient in istence. The production of these masks is progressing at a rate while sures that the requirements of the American troops abroad will be

Country Mayors.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch, The great war does not exclude local and so the time is at hand when the smaller and larger cities and towns figure on candidates for local offices. They are first to select a Mayor, usually som business man who has been enterprising, officient and generally well liked, besides doing a good business. So he is asked to become Mayor and with pardonable pride he feels he can be useful; accepts the nomination, is elected and up to the hour of the announcement of his election is a popular man.

These lines are written by a victim of this condition.

The first day he is in office his place of business is full of people who want this and that done. He listens from then as to what to do. Daily instead of attending to his business he is annoyed by all business, he wants to be clever and nice. and so puts in day after day hearing about how bad the little Jones boys are and what an awful bad man Smith is, and that whisky is being sold all over the town—as indeed it is in most of the dry towns.

slowly he loses his grip on business and very quickly he loses most of his friends, and in the time he has served his term out he has neither business nor friends. The thought I wish to point out is this: that since there is neither honor nor profit in such an office, why fool with it?

I want to make one suggestion, which never occurred to me in my time of office. It is this: when the daily crowd of kickers comes into a man's place of business, not for any business purpose, but to open up a lot of foolish complaints about this and that in the city, let the Honorable Mayor listen briefly, tell the trouble-finders and carriers that his time in the day must be given to his own business and that he will be at the city hall any nght or nights in the week to talk over all the things complained of; that the city hall is writes: rposely provided for such If this man the people have elected will listen all day to the songs of woe in his own business, nothing is more certain than in the course of two years he will not have any business and no man's commercial rating is benefitted by the fact that he is elected Mayor of his home town. A conference as important in its way as any contemplated the spoliation of or aggression military council ever held was inaugurated last against Russia. It would be gross violation of the week in Washington when representatives of principles for which we are fighting the German Government, capital and labor assembled to agree upon a war policy.

This fact, and the action of the meeting of the last month, has stirred all of the earnest roadbuilding bodies into new life. The National Good Roads Association is preparing for a record-breaking meeting in Little Rock early in April. The stimulus for this body is the recent success of the Arkansas officials in getting the Bankhead highway which connects several military camps in Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas, a military necessity for which materials will be shipped to rush the work.

The National Association of Retail Automobile Dealers, with headquarters in St. Louis, has taken up the matter of roads. It will work to have road plans in the north central states approved as military or economic necessities for two reasons: fice on the part of a country merchant do-ing well at the time of his candidacy and queer application of it which would omit the sold for this work and only material is needed.

In Missouri, the prison officials are offering more State prisoners for road work, and other tates are falling in line. Altogether a considerable revival of road building is expected this summer. And the roads need it, for the deep freezes of the recent very cold winter have caused great damage.

A WOMAN'S WORK.

The women of 1918 think they are mighty busy and they do get considerable done, but what mother's daughter of them does in a day what Abigail Foote did in 1775? And there is no reason to think that Abigail Foote was an exceptional or phenomenal woman.

Abigail lived in Connecticut and kept a diary, in which she seems to have set down with solemn satisfaction the daily tasks that her busy hands found to do. One day, which will serve very well as a sample, these are the things she did:

Fix'd gown for Prude, Mend Mother's Riding Hood, Spun Short thread,-Carded tow .-Worked on Cheese basket,—Hatchel's flag with Hannah, we did 51 lbs. apiece,—Pleated and ironed, Read a Serman of Doldridge's,— Spooled a piece,—Milked the cows,—Spun linen, did 50 knots,-Made a Broom of Guinea wheat straw,-Spun thread to whiten,-Set a Red dye,-Had two scholars from Mrs. Taylor's,-I carded two pounds of whole wool and felt Nationly,-Spun harness twine,-Scoured

It is barely possible that before Bolshevism gets done with the world we shall send for the Indians and ask them to restore our own country to that ideal state in which we found it. The probability that the Indian was only a savage and did not know what he was missing when he held the land in common and denied himself all those advantages derived from individual initiative and private ownership does not apreal to one at this time as it formerly did. Russia is going straight to that condition in which the population will be nothing more than so many Coxey's Armies wandering around on the face of the earth any petter objective than to keep on wandering, and that was exactly what the Indian had worked out to a science which Bolshevism cannot hope to equal in a hundred years. For all we know the Indian had passed through everything now and still to be in our own experience before we came, and what we found was not what we thought it to be at all, but that ultimate society which is to be the fate of us all. Let's think it over.

Unnecessary Economies.

From the Christian Science Monitor,

HE ingenuity of the schemes for conserving coal in the United States is no less remarkable than is their number. The latest claim is that a saving of more than 1,000,000 tons a year may be made by reducing, in all cities, the number of street car stops, and by limiting the use of coal for heating cars. The folly of this, and of other plans like it, should be made evident by the simple statement that there is no occasion for saving fuel, except in unnecessary emergencies like the p. TO WITHSTAND THE DEADLY GAS ATTACK the English, this department was in-corporated into the Medical Departnent of the army. The Bureau of Mines turned over much valuable material and still continues to give active co-operation.

How Service Is Divided.
The Gas Defense Service is divided into three separate parts: (1) Field supply section, (2) field training section and (3) overseas repair section.

The function of the field supply section is to manufacture or procure all gas defense materials and equipment. The big work, of course, is to furnish our troops with effective masks. The small box respirator type of mask, admittedly the best mask in existence, was accepted as

The manufacture of a gas mask of this type presented a problem. No manufacturing firms had experience with an article of this kind. More than ordinary care must be used in making parts, because the slightest defect would render the mask useless. The wide variety of materials going into the mask made it necessary to have the parts made in separate plants and assembled at a central plant. At present about 60 manufacturing firms contribute directly to the making of the American mask.

With no actual experience to de pend upon, much experimental and research work was necessary. An extensive experimental organization was built up, with branches in several cities. Recently it was decided to establish a Government operated plant to handle the final assembling and the difficult sewing operations on the face piece. This plant will on be in full operation with about 4000 employes.

The American gas mask, similar o the British, is as mechanically perfect as the best experts in the country have been able to produce. The vital feature of any respirator mask is the chemicals contained in the canister. These chemicals and absorbents are made from secret formulae.

How Work Is Adjusted.

The face piece consists of a base of cotton fabric, carefully rubber-ized. These face pieces are made to fit various types of faces. A net-work of elastic bands over the head holds the face piece in place. The is carried in a knapsack at the left When troops approach a danger zone, the straps are shortened and the knapsack is shifted to rest high on the chest, ready for instant use. This is known as the "alert posi-The soldier has merely to open the knapsack, pull out the lexible hose with the face piece attached, put the rubber mouthpiece in his mouth and adjust the bands over his head. The nose clip can easily be adjusted from the outside after the face piece is on. This nose clip insures that even if the fabric of the face piece should be pierced, the soldier would still be breathing entirely through his mouth. least one extra canister. These can-isters are detachable from the tube. When a canister has lost its efficiency, it can be detached, and a new canister put on.

About the first thing a soldier wants to know about a gas mask is how much protection it affords him. The best answer to this question is that the present American mask affords more protection than any other device in existence. The chemicals in the canister will neutralize the heaviest concentrations of gases for a period at least ten times longer gas attack.

In every knapsack is a record card on which each soldier must enter the me that his mask has been exposed o gas. This record, combined with subsequent examination, makes it possible to judge accurately when there is any danger of the chemicals being worn out. Before that point is reached a new mask is issued.

Masks for Horses, Too. While the main function of the Field Section is to supply gas masks. it is also responsible for the supply of all other gas defense equipment. This includes masks for horses, which consist of several layers of fabric which are impregnated with neutralizing chemicals. Trench or flapper fans must also be supplied in considerable number. Oxygen inhalers and oxygen bottles for use in field and base hospitals are also supplied in large numbers. Instruments for the detection of gas and the spreading of gas alarms are neces-sary. These consist of horns, rat-les and special detecting devices. There is perhaps no feature of modern warfare in which the psy-chological element is more important than in connection with gas. Gases are uncanny to the untrained man. Every soldier must be made to understand that there is no protection except the gas mask, and he must believe in the value of his equipment. He must realize that the equipment itself will not do the work unless he is skillful in adjusting it quickly and being accustomed to wear it without feeling hampered.

Reports of gas attacks show that the casualties are caused not so much by defective masks as by lack of raining. Here are excerpts from official reports from the western front, giving reasons for gas casualties:

"Officers and men sleeping in dugouts without having their masks attached to them, or being caught away from their dugouts without their masks."

"Helmets being worn under over-coats, with consequent difficulty in getting them out and putting them n quickly.' "Men in support trenches not geting the warning in time."

"Men thinking that gas was gone and taking their masks off."
Since casualties like these occur every time a gas attack is made, it is obvious that simply to provide troops with gas masks is not enough. They must be drilled until they feel their respirators are a part of their Wide Distribution of Milk.

H. E. Mortland, secretary of the commission, the headquarters of which are located at 1726 North Thirteenth street, reported that 391. 399 bottles of milk were prepared for baby consumption and delivered by the commission at less than cost in 1917. Of these 52,550 bottles were for them.

When milk prices were advanced by the producers last fall the commission, co-operating with the Food Administration, began distributing milk at 10 cents per bottle, or about cost. The milk was supplied by the St. Louis Dairy Co., which delivered it to the central stations operated by the organization. In this way 25,233 quarts of milk were distributed at an estimated saving of $756.99 to the consumers since November.

CHICAGO, March 2.—John F. manufacturer, under sentence to serve two years in prison and pay a fine of $10,000 on charge of conspiring to defraud the Government of taxes, must serve his sentence, according to a decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, which, today, upheld the decision of Federal Judge Landis.

The conviction of seven business ssociates of Jelke's also was upheld. Francis M. Lowry, general manager for Jelke, must serve a year in the Federal prison and pay a $5000 fine. The six others must pay fines of $2500 each.

Jelke, president of the oleomarga-rine firm bearing his name, was found guilty in 1913 of conspiring to defraud the Government out of the 10-cents-per-pound tax. Due to Jelke's former political prominence, the case attracted wide attention. Appeal was made to former President Taft to have the prosecution dropped by presidential order, but he declined to act.

St. Louis terminals. "I have always been of the opinion that after absorbing the so-called bridge arbitrary they secured their St. Louis terminals at a much lower cost, relatively, than their terminals in other cities. If this principle was admittedly sound as applied to more distant shipments, I could never un-derstand any grounds for differentiation when applied to nearby ship ments, and as the manufacturing industries of a city are far and away the largest factor in developing its population, it has always seemed to me that the arbitrary charge on coal was an unfair discrimination against George Warren Brown, chairman of the board of the Brown Shoe Co. and a director of the Third National Bank., in a telegram to the Post-Dispatch from Asheville, S. C., said: been an unfair handicap to the growth of St. Louis. Rival American cities are not thus hampered. We must have full emancipation now and St. Louis will go forward by leaps and bounds."

Ernest W. Stix, president of the rector of the Mercantile Trust Co "I am entirely in sympathy with the movement of the Chamber of Com merce to abolish the arbitrary. Th St. Louis terminal should be treat-ed as one instead of two distinct points, and the arbitrary should no more apply within the 100-mile radius than from any point beyond it The arbitrary is discriminatory to-ward the city of St. Louis and should be abolished. Every burden of this sort hurts St. Louis, and while it might be hard to figure just what the actual damage has been through the existence of such a situation, is a fact that every exera charge o that kind interferes with the devel

"I believe that the abolition of th arbitrary would have a decidedly good effect on the commercial and industrial situation and would place St. Louis in a much more favorable light in bidding for new factories and other industries, which might be considering St. Louis as a possible location. The existence of the arbitrary no doubt has discouraged many industries from coming here.' W. J. Kinsella, president of the Hanley & Kinsella Coffee Co. and a director of the Mercantile Trust Co.: "The time has come when the arbitrary should be abolished and therefore am in favor of the fight to this end announced by the Chamber of Commerce. The 14 railroads which come into this city and use the terminal facilities, should absorb this arbitrary. The arbitrary has been the biggest argument against St. Louis by these firms which have considered locating here. The companies which have located on the East Side have done so because of this arbitrary charge. I believe that the commercial sit uation would improve greatly if the arbitrary were removed.

John O. Ballard, president of the Merchants Exchange and president of the Ballard-Messmore Grain Co.: I heartily indorse the action of the Chamber of Commerce in beginning a fight for the abolition of the bridge arbitrary, and I believe that virtually all of the members of the Merchants Exchange are in sympathy with the plan. The arbitrary is a false charge and should be eliminated. East St. Louis and St. Louis should be one industrial zone. Mr. Folk, in his speech before the Chamber of Commerce, stated very clearly the ituation in regard to the arbitrary. The Jersey City case is a parallel sit uation. If East St. Louis receives as favorable rates it is because the town is close to St. Louis, and not James W. Harris, president of the on a small portion of their line. They only avorable rates it is because the own is close to St. Louis, and not because of its own individual situation. It is individual situation. ASKED TO SUPPORT

Requests Telegraphed to Missourians by Chamber of Commerce and Other Bodies.

The Chamber of Commerce vesterday telegraphed to Missouri Senaors and Congressmen in Washington, asking their support of a bill mbodying recommendations of the Joint Congressional Investigating Free Sample Coupon
ORLEX MANUFACTURING CO. Dopt. 94
101 Bookman St., New York, N. Y. Committee that the pneumatic tube mail service of St. Louis be more than doubled by extensions and that the tubes be purchased by the Government from the contractors who own them.

> Letter mail in large quantities is handled through tubes in St. Louis between the main postoffice at Eighteenth street and Clark avenue and the central station at Eighth and Olive streets, between the main postoffice and Bridge Station, at Third street and Washington avenue, and between Bridge Station and Central Station. The total length of the tubes is 1.9 miles.

Extension of Service Urged. To increase the efficiency in handling mail in St. Louis the congressional committee recommended extensions of the system to provide tube from the main postoffice to Cupples Station, at 217 South Seventh street, to the Merchants Exchange Station, at Third and Pine streets, to Bridge Station, to Progress Station, at Seventeenth and Locust streets, and thence to the main postoffice.

In no other city were extensions recommended, and those in St. Louis were advised, notwithstanding the opposition of Postmaster-General Burleson, who for more than a year has been advocating the relinquish-ment of tube service and the substitution of automobile service for handling all mail. Other Pleas to Congressmen.

In addition to the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants Exchange, the Manufacturers' Association and the Million Population Club telegraphed Missouri's representatives in Congress urging them to support the extension of the service.

At hearings held in St. Louis several months ago by the investigat-ing committee, the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations pro duced evidence to demonstrate the value of the tube service and the devoted to abolishing it. 'It undoubtedly limiting commercial progress in this city. If we were to learn why so many of the industrial plants and manufacturing companies have left St. Louis we would find that it was to escape paying the arbitrary charge. The factories that have settled on the East Side certainly did so to get cheaper coal. They no doubt would much rather e in St. Louis with its vastly superior fire and police protection and living conditions, if the rate situaion was just as favorable. Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Co.: My notion is that it is a stupendous mistaks for the Chamber of Commerce to take up a fight against the Terminal Association at this time, when all rail-roads of the country, including the Terminal Association, are under Gov-ernment control. It only makes it more difficult for the railroad men doing business under very trying circumstances and under extraordinary conditions, and I have grave doubt whether it will accomplish any ben-eficial results to the city. Certainly the advertisement we are getting is Regiments to Be Honored for Being First in Battle Line Have Great Records.

PART IN ARMY HISTORY

Emblems for Sixth, Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh Infantry and Fourth Artillery.

PARIS, March 2 (By A. P.) .-- Decendants of Frenchmen who fought in the American Revolution have had magnificent flags embroidered by the most skillful workers in Paris to present to the first American regiments to take their places on the battle line in France.

The flags will be exhibited afternoon at the Invalides. The units chosen by the American Government to receive the flags are the Sixth, Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh Infantry and the Fourth Artillery.

Regiments to Be Honored Have Records for Distinguished Service.

The five regiments to receive flags France tomorrow, by virtue of their good fortune in having been selected for the first American service on the battle front, possess rec ords for distinguished service in the history of our army.

The Ninth Infantry particularly distinguished itself in the Chinese Boxer Rebellion in 1900, when, cσoperating with German, Japanese English, Italian, Russian and French troops, it was among the American troops the first to enter Pekin for the relief of the foreign legations In this battle its commanding offi er. Col. Liscumb, was killed. News dispatches of Aug. 18, 1900 escribing the advance of the allies on Pekin, said: From Peitsang the allies took up the advance, with Yangtsun the next objective, and captured it the follow-ing day, Aug. 6. In this engagement the Americans had the lion's share of the fighting. They made a brilliant charge with the British on the trenches of the Chinese, driving them in flight. The American casu-alties were Lieut. F. R. Lang, Ninth Infantry, wounded, and 60 men killed, wounded and prostrated."

It was after the Ninth Infantry had entered Pekin that Col. Liscumb fell mortally wounded. The Ninth went to China from the Philippines, where it had taken an active part in suppressing the Philippine insurrec-

The Sixth Infantry, fighting alongside the Sixteenth Infantry, was first to begin the charge up San Juan Hill n the Spanish-American War. The Tenth Infantry is particularly distinguished for brilliant fighting in Indian wars in Texas in the late '60s and early '70s.

The Eleventh Infantry fought hrough the Cuban campaign and vas in Porto Rico. The Fourth Artillery has a brilliant Civil War record, and also fought through the Spanish War.

Bud" Fisher Gets Captain's Comsion in British Army and Will

Soon Go Overseas. NEW YORK, March 2 .- "Bud"

Fisher, the cartoonist, who draws Mutt and Jeff, has just been made a captain in the British Army. Fisher, who has always been interested in soldiering and who cam-paigned in Mexico with Gen. Villa in 1915, when he was made a Captain in that army, attended the last Plattsburg Camp. He was com-missioned a Lieutenant in Field Artillery and assigned to Camp

Fisher found that it would probably be come time before that division got abroad, and he was anxious to see the "show," so he recently offered his resignation in the American Army, which was accepted by the Secretary of War. He was then offered and accepted a commission as Captain in the Brit ish Army.

Capt. Fisher has been appointed to Lord Beavenbrook's staff and will go overseas in about two weeks. He is going to take Mutt and Jeft o the trenches with him.

There is an axiom abroad that only a man in uniform can "kid the war," as Capt. Bruce Bairns-father of the British Army has done. The British War Office consider. his work of great value as a tonic and keeps him on special service in France.

Which we offer at the extremely low price of $1 IT was exceedingly good fortune which brought this lot of pretty Dresses to our attention, and it resulted in the purchase of them at a marked price concession which we in turn share with you. There are women's and misses' garments, smartly made of taffeta and messaline silks, and a few of them of foulard. They are in shades of green, navy, rose, tan, gray and black.

Many are in Georgette combination-some beautifully embroidered, others have Georgetti or white satin collars, pockets and button trimming. In every instance, they are exceptional values at the sale price.

DO not measure the importance of Monday's store news by the size of our announcement. A great many offerings which we term "startling" will be found in many of the departments; in fact, there are a score of "sales" which deserve equal consideration to the above sale of Dresses.

That Never Fails to Give Immediate Results

Here is a safe and easy method for getting at catarrh that invariably surprises chronic sufferers because of the immediate and pleasing effects it produces. There is no waiting for results. Just to cite an instance, take the experience of Mr. H. Elser, Lexington, Neb., who writes: "Dear Sam Katz: I received your catarrh treatment, and in two days my catarrh was gone. I am now cured."

The Sam Katz method which this gentleman and thousands of others have used, is different from anything you have ever known of. There is nothing to smoke, spray or inject; no salves, creams, vibration or massage. Everything about it is natural and healthful. The exact remedial combination of this method is a secret known only to myself and my associates, although I will say this much; it is based on the modern scientific discovery that the discass germs causing catarrh must be destroyed and dislodged from the infected tissue in order to effect a radical and permanent cure.

Individualism Rises.

"When the repression was removed, all the good people tried at once to carry out their individual wishes. Free speech had been pre-vented, so everybody went to public meetings from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. There had been no free press, so numerous newspapers were started. J have seen a man reading a paper in the street to a group of 20 others. Two-thirds of the people cannot read. Being ignorant, they carried their freedom too far." To illustrate, he related how a rainload of soldiers forced the engineer to proceed, contrary to or-ders. A wreck followed, and 401 of the soldiers were burned to death. Waiters organized and established their wages at 15 per cent of the gross receipts. They refused there-after to take tips. Chamber of Commerce Committee Urges Contributions Only to Worthy Ones.

Lists Approved Agencies and Those on Which Catholic Archbishop Can Give Information.

The Charities Committee of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, in is-suing its list of indorsed charities for 1918, urges contributors to conserve this year in the sense of giving only to those charities which have been investigated and found to be worthy. The following guides to intelligent giving are set forth in the booklet as aids to such conservation:

Do not give to collectors just to get rid of them; frauds flourish on such unwise generosity. Ask solicitors to show their credentials; they should carry prop-er credentials signed by an officer

It is safest to mail your check directly to the treasurer of the organization, and not give it to the solicitor. Do not give cash to so-licitors: you have no means of telling whether it ever reaches the charity. Beware of an organization which cannot give a better address than a postoffice box number. A bona fide organization will have a street address. Every reputable charitable agency has a board of managers to direct its work and control its finances; beware of "one-man" or-

A charitable organization, if run properly, should have its accounts satisfactorily audited annually, and should be willing to make a public annual financial statement. Refuse to contribute to any orthis. Consult our booklet list-

Remember that unworthy charitable enterprises are as often conducted by women as men. The fact that a woman solicitor appeals to you for a contribution does not necessarily imply that the charity is worthy.

subscribe, or let the Charities Bureau do the investigating for you. There is no disgrace in giving wisely.

Describing the sacrifice of English women, Miss Fraser said that thousands of girls have volunteered to work in munition plants where they handle "T. N. T." an explosive the fumes of which she said cause the skin and hair to turn permanently yellow. More than 1,000,000 British women are making munitions, and 3000 are working in one shipyard, at manual labor, she asserted.

Women Excel Men. The speaker related how women's eams formed in munition plants to rush shells for the Cambrai attack. same size, turned out 30 per, cent more shells than the men.

Miss Fraser told how fats were onserved, by saving all trimmings from meat, all scraps from soldiers plates, and distilling fats from dish water. She said that fats enough for 18,000,000 shells were salvaged last year from camp kitchens.

Women are now making 90 per cent of the small shells turned out by British plants, she said. She added that 258,000 women are doing farm labor in the British Isles, and that the acreage under cultivation last year was 1,000,000 acres greater than before the war.

Business Better Than Ever. When I urge your people here to have to have, they always talk 'ruining trade," Miss Fraser said. "That is bad reasoning. The manufacture of pianos is prohibited in England but the piano factories are making airplanes, and doing more business than before the war.

"Shops for fashionable tailoring before the war now are making officers' uniforms, and employing more people than they did. Business has not been ruined—it has simply been as the army/needs munitions."

All Society Girls Work.

Miss Fraser said that all bread in England and France is half wheat. She declared she had not seen white bread for a year until she came to the United States. Eating has been reduced to a point where only enough food is consumed to maintain

"All the society girls of London are working," she continued. "Those who aren't nurses or munition work There are no idle people in England and France except those who delib crately choose to be so."

She declared that virtually all the college-bred girls in England are supervisors in munition plants. One such girl superintends the work of 6000 women, she said.

"But, you ask, what has become of our homes," said the speaker. "I want to tell you that our infant death rate is lower than it ever has work is being done than ever before We are saving the babies. The extra work is being done by those who were idle before, and by the former workers becoming more efficient. Morals Are Better.

"As to morals, it also is true that the illegitimate birth rate in England has been lower in 1915-16-17 than any time in our history. Thousands of our girls are sent away from home to work, but they are cared for by older, experienced women." Miss Fraser said that there are, in hospitals in England, beds enough to care for 800,000 wounded, and beds for more than 500,000 in France. The pessimist who thinks the automobile business is poor at this time is under a great misapprehension. Nearly every dealer is meeting with unusual inquiries and making sales. Frank R. During the month of February the company also sold at wholesale 36 Dodge cars.

The sales of exchange cars, which have been taken in on Dodge sales were abnormally large. Forty used cars were sold during the month of February and of these George Dunville sold 28. STUDEBAKER EXPRESS CAR FOR TRAVELING SALESMEN

The knight of the grip who de-pends solely upon the railroads to transport himself and his samples from town to town this year faces the most difficult problem that has ever confronted a commercial traveler. With many passenger trains already removed from the service and with predictions being freely made that passenger train schedules will be still further cut, the experiing efficiency will be greatly de-creased if indeed his entire business is not jeopardized. There seems to be but one satisfactory answer-to this trying problem. It is motor cars, and already many salesmen are preparing to make their calls sucessfully and surely by motor. The sample cases are another

WILL CAMOUFLAGE

FAMOUS SCOUT CAR Out of California comes the word that "camouflaging" will soon be a national art among America's famous artists, classicists, cubists and im pressionists. To automobile owners this is of special interest, for it is the motor car that is first being roped, tied and 'camouflaged."

Imagine your automobile being so decorated that standing still or moving at any speed it will prove invisible to the eye at a short distance! That is what is called "camouflaging" your car. In other words, painting it so that it looks like what it "ain't!

Of such tremendous import is this art that the Government has taken it under its wing, and the colony of artists who formed this society spread the study all over the country, until the Government took cognizance of the movement and absorbed all the various societies under a Governmen department.

W. L. Hughson of Kissel Kar fame on the Pacific Coast, well known for his patriotic foresight of preparedness by originating motor car classe to prepare women for war times and other patriotic measures, has donated the famous Kissel military scout car recently used to blaze the "threenation run" from Canada to Mexico over the proposed new military high-way in record time.

A committee of three prominent San Francisco artists have been delegated to paint this car with color patches, which suggest nothing except the surrounding earth, trees, grain fields, sky, etc., resulting in the car blending in with its surroundings and will be an exact facsimile of the cars now being used by the allies along the various war fronts.

When completely "camouflaged" the disguised car will start on a long tour to familiarize people with this very important addition to our mili

Auto Co. to a questionnaire recently sent out to determine what service the Maxwell one-ton trucks were rendering to their owners. Some interesting averages were found from a recent group received.

For six months these trucks had a daily mileage of 31 miles, while the average load carried was 2929 pounds. The gasoline consumption was very favorable, the reports showing an average of 10½ miles to the gallon, this being for the six months period. The nine trucks, included in the average, replaced according to their owners' statements, 52 horses, and they further state that they save at least one-half on the time formerly needed for the work.

The Weber company, feeling that the actual experience of the owners is the best selling argument, are keeping in close touch with all Maxwell truck owners and compiling the reports for ready reference for prospective truck users. These are also sent to the factory for the benefit of the engineering department, that any difficulties that afise may be analyzed and corrected.

The new organization has taken quarters at 3314 Pine street and Frank A. Martin, the president, plans to establish immediately day and night service for the benefit of their owners. A large stock of parts for the different models was received with the first shipment of trucks and factory trained mechanics will be in charge of the work.

A plain window glass lens wastes all light that goes above 42 inches from the ground. Many other devices choke back the light to a point where they make driving unpleasant, and often dangerous.

By an optically-correct arrangement of prisms, the McKee Standard Lens makes all the light do useful work. average truck loads passing.

"During the two hours' observation, an ever 100 trucks were checked. Of these, 46 were empty, 30 carried partial loads and 24 were loaded to capacity. This shows an average operating efficiency of only 37 per cent.

"Though carrying full loads at all times is a goal quite out of reach of most truck owners, today's transportation needs demand better planning. It is reasonable to expect that improved hauling methods, co-operative delivery, better adaption of units to their work, and more dependable units could increase present efficiency by at least one-fourth."

PERFORMANCE—Get away from generalities. The Chevrolet will travel on the level at 5 miles an hour on high -go up Art Hill at 5 miles on highpick up and run like a deer at 30-35 miles an hour-pull thru mud, sand, slush or anything else-in plain words it will go anywhere under any conditions possible for an automobile and come back.

DEPRECIATION-We have standardized the depreciation of a Chevrolet-a 1916 Chevrolet after 33 months of service is worth $275 in trade—it only cost $569—the depreciation is only $294 for 33 months of use or absolutely the lowest of any electrically equipped automobile in the world.

UPKEEP-Last October the Brandle Motors Company sent a circular to a list of 500 owners of Chevrolets in St. Louis asking for up-keep information-102 of these cards came back—they showed that the average owner in St. Louis was getting 21.6 miles on a gallon of gasoline and that his repair bill was the insignificant sum of $8.85 for 4000 miles of use-probably the lowest in the world.

TWO CASES-Mr. A. R. Strong, 4510a Athlone Av., has driven a Chevrolet 8026 miles, averaging 32 miles per gallon of gasoline and with a total repair bill of $14.70.

Dr. H. F. Miller, 730 Baden Av., has driven a Chevrolet 20,000 miles, averaging 23 miles per gallon of gasoline and with a total repair bill of $15.00.

THE BASIC REASONS—The Chevrolet is built of the very finest materials possible. The motor is of closely grained gray iron, the flexibility and durability of which is beyond question—the chassis and wearing parts are built of fine, resilient, sturdy stock, thoroughly tempered and reheated time and time again as each case requires. The heat and wear of friction has been met with Chrome Vanadium Steel-springs, rear axle and third member shafts together with gears in transmission are of the same material. In the motor, the connecting rods, crankshaft and camshaft, too, as well as the knuckles and steering arms of the front axle are of the same tensile compound. The finished machinery is as reliable as the strength of material and the care of men can make it.

The Chevrolet is the lowest priced electrically equipped Automobile in the world—it is complete in every particular.

Its operating expense is less than any Automobile on which authoritative records have ever been secured.

It is the one car which any man or woman can own and which makes of a motor car a real investment and a pleasure at the same time.

Convince yourself-see the Chevrolet and compare it with any car at any price.

THE NORTH PUBLIC HEALTH BUREAU 30 CHURCH STREET - NEW YORK

February 5, 1918

Mr. D. C. Rerekhoff, Pres't. Pevely Dairy Co., St. Louis, Mo.

I think I have visited most of the large dairy, plants in the United States and Canada. Yours is the first I have seen in which the different departments/ of the business are in separate buildings.

The division of the milk handling in one build-ing, the power plant and the machinery in another, we and the stable in the third, is a great advantage in maintaining the cleanliness and sanitation of milk.

The cement and steel construction impressed me as not only substantial but also making it possible to prevent the accumulation of dust and dirt, and easy to keep clean.

I noticed especially the abundance of floor space in your milk department, and the great amount of light from the numerous windows, and the provision for abundant ventilation. The same things appeared to be true in the horse stable regarding light and ventilation, Taken as a whole, from my experience with milk lants I feel free to say that in your set of buildngs St. Louis possesses the most up-to-date and san itary milk plant in America.

Sincerely yours,

Charles ENorth

The court used last night was a comfortably large one, and thus the maroon men had an opportunity to show their best teamplay, a condi-tion which did not exist in the first game at the small Billiken court. Both quintets showed improved teamplay and the floor work was well above the ordinary, but the scoring did not come up to standard. Washington men missed many shots, and thus a superior passing game went for naught.

Ticket Speculators Are Hit.

W HEN we made matches in those days we always made them so as to protect the public from speculators and so forth. For instance, for Sullivan's fight with Charlie Mitchell, the only important fight he had in 1883, outside of that with Herbert Slade, the Maori, the articles of agreement read like this:

"NEW YORK, April 16, 1883. "Agreement entered into between James Wakely, on behalf of John L. The REAL Life Story of John L.

In the first installment of his story. Wakely told how Sullivan went through with a bout that had been "framed up" against him by his own manager. In the installment which is printed today is told of his bout with Herbert Slade, the Maori,

Music Soothes All Our Troubles

Picture what it means to an army, to marching soldiers, to a hospital, to a prisoner, to a church, a theater, or a home, to be without music.

Music Is God's Gift to the Weary --- it is educational, inspiring, healthful. It sends red blood tingling through the veins, and fits us for the stern battles that must be fought at home.

Home Ties Are Drawing Closer, we do not know when they will be broken, and so there is an increasing tenderness, a new devotion one to another. We need music to cheer, to hold the fragrance of home through days of anxious waiting.

Have an Autopiano in Your Home --- let us explain to you our easy arrangement by which you can own one of the wonderful instruments.

The Autopiano has secured more rewards of merit than any Player made. There are over 100 Autopianos on U. S. Battleships and Cruisers. There is an Autopiano on a Torpedo Boat Destroyer. There are hundreds of Autopianos being used in our cantonment camps.

The Player Piano of All the World.

There are more Autopianos in St. Louis homes than any two other player-pianos combined.

New York Market Reflects Coniderable Selling to Secure

LIST IRREGULAR

Chevrolet Stock Is Feature of Trading in the Outside Market.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch. NEW YORK, March 2.—The Even-g Post, in its copyrighted weekly nancial review, says:

NEW YORK, March 2.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"The Treasury's announcement of last night, that the next 'Liberty loan campaign' will begin on April 6, and that the loan will be issued three or four weeks later, will cause no great surprise. The end of April would be about the time when the large issued of short term Government notes, under the pending program of maturities, would naturally have to be cared for through a public loan. That date would also be late enough in the spring to admit of a 'nation-wide drive' for subscriptions on the scale of last year's two successful achievements of the sort.

The decision has been made as to amount or terms of the coming loan—on which, no doubt, will depend very largely the influence which it will exert on the general investment market. The interest rate which the new bonds will bear will be determind partly by the character of the loan itself, and partly by the state of the inconey market. But it is evident also that the amount of the Government's borrowing will be determined by something else.

The New Liberty Lean.

The Government has as yet made no revision publicly, of its estimate, in the Treasury's annual report of last December, that something like $10,000,000,000 would have to be raised through additional bond issues before the and of the fiscal year on the 30th of June. That estimate, as is well known, was based on the Treasury's other calculation that the Government's total disbursements in that fiscal year—for its own civil and war expenditure, for its loans to the alles, and for interest on the public debt—would be $18,775,000,000. Yet all the current returns of Government disbursements are emphasizing the belief that this was a very great evacestimate.

"Results for the month of February and therefore the results of the the belief that this was a very great overestimate.

"Results for the month of February, and therefore the results of the eight completed months of the fiscal year, are published today from Washington. They seem to make impossible such a total figure as that in the eatimate of last December.

"With two-thirds of the fiscal year completed, less than $7,50,000,000 of the estimated total expenditure of $18,775,000,000, is accounted for. The Washington dispatches of this morning say that $10,647,000,000 has been spent in the eight completed months, but that is a very misleading statement. That sum is reached through including in the expenditure of the period, upwards of $3,000,000,000,000 paid out in redemption of short-term Government indebtedness.

Transury's Estimate High.

"But those redemptions were effected through the proceeds of previous war loans; they appear therefore, on both sides, of the balance sheet, and have nothing whatever to do with the sum total of the fiscal year's expenditure; when that item is deducted, as it should be, it will be seen that to reach the Treasury's figures for the fiscal year, disbursemants for our Government's own pur-be been that to reach the Treasury figures for the fiscal year, disburs manis for our Government's own purposed and for loans to the alli would have to average $2,800,000.0 in each of the four remaining month "But that is manifestly impossible avenditure in January w

"But that is manifestly impossib when expenditure in January way only $1,090,000,000, and in Februar $85,000,000 less. All that can safel be said today is, that if the Februar affd January rate of daily expenditure were to be maintained unchanged, the fiscal year's total expenditure would be $7,000,000,000 blow the December estimate.

"It is reasonable to look for progressive monthly increase, a though no more was spent last monthan in the month before, and the had been an average monthly, it rease, in preceding months, of near ly $100,000,000.

"But a most liberal allowance for that no more than $5,000,000,000, the outside, will be needed up to to come of the Treasury's prediction.

"But a most liberal allowance for the first and the second interest payments on pulle debt, in May and June) appearable to leave it the outstanding factors.

war itself.

"Russian developments have not changed ideas as to duration of the war. Financial circles still expect that the war will last until your military co-operation is fully efective; believing that a decisive military victory by the allies is the only possible fory by the allies is the only possible means for insuring lasting worl's

Oats and Corn Record Losses for the Week on Merchants' Exchange.

Sharp setback in values on the Merchant's Exchange here last week resulted largely from the establishing of maximum price limits on every commodity that is traded in. Oats were affected most. Compared with a week ago corn closed unchanged to %c to %c lower. Oats were off %c to %c. Despite a general rush to let go to %c.

Despite a general rush to let go of speculative holdings of oats the corn market held relatively steady. The chief reason was that the new restrictions did not apply directly to corn any more than had been the case for some time.

Notwithstanding that receipts were the heaviest yet this season, the corn market gradually recovered from most of the bearish influences of the sweepmarket gradually recovered from most of the bearish influences of the sweeping measures in regard to the extension of maximum prices, especially after the fact became apparent that export demand was again a substantial factor. earth to Heaven three years ago day.

Days of sadness still come o'er me,
Tears of silence often flow,
For memory keeps you ever near me,
Though you died three years ago.
So often I go to your grave,
Lingering there and trying to be brave,
But, oh, 'tis hard to bear,'
To go away and leave you there.
Sadly missed by her mother, MRS. E. JOHN.

In loving memory of my dear son and our dear brother. Frank Gilleran, who departed this life four years ago. March 1, 1914.

Forget you we never will; It was a bitter pain, a shock severe, To part with you, we loved so dear. It left us broken-hearted:

And while you rest in peaceful sleep, Your memory we shall always keep. Sally missed more and more as the years go by, by his mother, brother and sister, grandmother, aunt and all his many other relatives, Mrs. Gilleran.

Some time our hands shall press in

And never say farewell.
Her merry laugh we hear no more,
The voice we loved is still,
And all taht is left for memory
Is her grave on a distant hill.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Predicts That Next Legislature Will Be Prohibition, Despite St. Louis.

PASSES THROUGH CITY

Disturbance in Canada Cause by Influence of Liquor Interests, He Declares.

William Jennings Bryan, former Secretary of State, was in St. Louis esterday on his way to Hope, Ark. He came here direct from Toronto, where on Thursday night, in attempting to deliver a prohibition speech, he was hooted and heckled by returned Canadian soldiers.

He attributed the interruptions to by returned Canadian soldiers.

He attributed the interruptions to the influence of the liquor interests, and he pointed out that those who interrupted him were only a minority of the audience. He said there were 65 of them in a crowd of 5000. He took occasion to predict that Missouri will elect a dry Legislature this year, and that prohibition will be enacted in this State in spite of the heavy wet vote in St. Louis; also that national prohibition will be in force within two years. Regarding the Toronto incident, he said to a Post-Dispatch reporter:

"I am glad you asked me about that. The space given to the Toronto incident shows one of the incurable faults of the newspapers. They give publicity to the exception rather than to the rule. They give space to assault and battery, but they have no room to tell about neighbors living together peacefully. They tell about the divorces, but say nothing about the happy families. So it was in the Toronto instance. The papers gave more space to the 65 disturbers than the 5000 in the audience who anted to hear me and wanted the 65 disturbers removed from the hall. If doubt if I ever spoke to as large an audience in the United States with as few unfriendly hearers. But opposition here is different and not like that indulged in by British audiences which have a way of heckling' speakers. A man on the platform told me he counted the dis-turbers and he said there were 65. This was only a small proportion of the returned soldiers, who must num-ber 2000 or 3000 in Toronto.

Assails "Wet" Newspapers. The disturbance was instigated by two 'wet' newspapers in Toronto which carry liquor advertisements. One paper which objected to my visit carried in the same issue a full page advertisement for a liquor company.
"They did't state their real rea-on for interrupting my speech. They are like Demetrius, the silversmith who appealed to his class."

Here Bryan took a Bible from his pocket and read about Demetrius from the "Acts." "When Paul tried to speak," he said, "the followers of Demetrius would cry out: 'Great is Diana.' What they meant was that if Christianity were to take the place of paganism they would lose their profitable oc-cupation of making silver statues of the pagan gods and goddesses. Those Toronto newspapers knew that if the they would lose the profit from liquor advertisements. Presiding Officer Objected. "The presiding officer of the meet-ing, a former Mayor of Toronto, ing, a former Mayor of Toronto, wanted to call the police and have the disturbers ejected. I would not permit this, as I feared it might cause panic or injury. I spoke at two other meetings in Toronto and was respectfully listened to."

Dispatches from Toronto yester-

Dispatches from Toronto yesterday stated that Bryan began, his speech by saying: "My country has subscribed $7,000,000,000 and raised an army of 1,500,000 men." It was stated that cries of "Lusitania," "Belgium." and "Pro-German," interspersed with cat-calls, hisses and patriotic songs from organized groups of discharged veterans al-lowed him to add only one sentence in seven minutes of struggle for a hearing. Bryan then stated to the press: "My patriotism is satisfactory to the President, Cabinet and Congress of the United States.'

Doings NHOL Reported by KENDRICK Wireless BANGS to

Kidd, as he entered the ll-brary of the Hun, who was seated in one corner of the room sipping his favorite tipple of wood alcohol and tobasco sauce, "If it isn't good old Att! What's the matter, old man? You look like the Gloom Trust. When I first caught sight of you I thought you were a thunder cloud, and had visions of a heavy rain, you look so black."

"Well, why shouldn't I?" retorted Attila, with a grim scowl.
"Because, old top," grinned the Captain, "your reign is over; your stunt is to do the rainbow act."
"Humph!" sniffed the Hun. "Rainbow act, eh? After that?"
He banged his fist viciously upon the first page of the Gehenna Gazette, where, capped with headlines of the most approved scare-head pattern, Capt. Kidd read the following:
"A WORTHY SON OF A FAMOUS HUN.
"Latest advices from the upper world are to the effect that Kalser William the Second has taken as his model in the savage forms of warfare he is waging on the women and children of the earth his predecessor in pillage, Peter B. Attila, Esq., formerly of Hunville-on-the-Spree, and now a prominent resident of Hades. Those who have followed the courses of the two distinguished potentates find an amazingly complete parallel between the infamous conduct of the two men, and a recent interview granted the Potsdam correspondent of the Gazette by the present head of the German empire would seem to indicate that the similarity is not a mere accident, but a matter of premeditated choice on the part of the reigning sovereign.

"Yes, said the Kalser, as he graciously received your correspondent in the dark room where he was having his daily flashlight taken. I am perfectly willing to admit it. Attills is my great exemplar. They say I am conceited, and regard myself as the great originator of all the truly progressive movements of my time, when, as a matter of fact, there never has been in all recorded history a more modest man than Myself—print that Myself with a capital M, please, like the G in Gott—nor a more apit pupil of an inspiring teacher. It was not I who invented German Killter—I—er—I mean Kultur—but that rare spirit, Attila, my illustrious predecessor in Teutonic effort. It was he who first laid down the fundamental principles upon which the glorious regeneration of a degenerate world might be begun."

"Would your Imperial Majesty deign to state in a single word just what the fundamental steed." we asked.

"With pleasure, replied the Kaiser, scratching his left ear with the prong of his right mustache. It is simplicity itself. To eradicate weakness from the world, strike at its source. ERADICATE THE WEAKLING. In other words, war upon the helpless. The helpless are a burden to every community. Every dependent person in the world is a hindrance to the growth of the stronger individual upon ress, and thereby diminishes the possible sum total of the world's advance toward that perfection of which we Hohenzollerns are the supreme efflorescence. It was upon that basis that Attila the Master invariably acted, and in this present conflict in the destruction of old of women, old men and little children, for which the squeamish have so severely critiched me, I am but carrying out his noble policles for the benefit of the whole human kind."

Capt. Kidd read the above carefully, and with a beaming smile he turned to the angry Hum.

"Why, my dear old boy," said he, "what is there about that for you to be angry about? I should say that was a tribute rather than a slam."

Tribute nothing," retorted Attila, with a scowl. "It's pure, unadulterated libel—that's what it is, and I'm not going to stand for it. I have retained the firm of Coke, Blackstone & Lycurgus to institute a suit at once for libel against Jim Boswell for printing such the disgusting stuff about me. Things are getting so here

Capt. Kidd has returned to earth again and resumed operations, although this time the buccaneer is not flying the black flag upon the high each, but is doing a land-office business as a promoter of war charities, from which he is deriving huge profits at the expense of the alleged beneficiaries thereof. Sweral individuals have just been indicted by the grand fury of New York for pocketing the bulk of the proceeds of the recent Army and Navy Bazar, at which $75,000 was received, and from which the beneficiaries got less than $760. The parallel between activities of this nature and the piratical schemes of Capt. Kidd is so clear that"—

"Stop right there!" reared Kidd, brandishing a dagger over Attlia's bead. "You and I have been pals for many a long year, Att, but I want to say before the you go a siep further that I shall consider even the supposation of such a case a deadly insult."

"Well, there you are!" laughed Attlia. "I don't bhame you."

"Tou'd better not blame me," said Kidd, quivering with wrath. "The way you go a step further that I shall consider even the supposation of such a case a deadly insult."

"You'd better not blame me," said Kidd, quivering with wrath. "The way the said was a stat makes my blood boll."

"The way you know how I feel when Jim Boowell likens me to Kaiser William."

"Oh, but It's different, in your case," said Kidd. "You must admit that as a pillager you were a pretty alick article, Att. There want thus you weren't up on, and generally over the top with. If you didn't want to, but because you shoveled phakes and public libraries and private dwellings into the furnace, whenever you didn't have much on the supposation of any went the said Attlia. "Granted and proud of it. I was fit further thanged for the public of the said Attlia. "Granted and proud of it. I was fit was a pillage, I had Molock, Anthropophagus, Blue Beard, be seen a long and the said of the beard of the public hards as a solution for rascality. If sever a loose fish awan the sea, or a hary of their is unit of the

"That's what I've been waiting for," said Kidd.

"Knew there'd be a but butting in before long. But what—out with it,"

"I never was a hypocrite!" said Attila. "What I did I did to gratify my own lusts and passions. If I shewered a baby on the end of my pike-staft I did it for the pleasure of hearing him squal, or seeing him squirm. I never pretended I was doing it as the instrument of God or for the benefit of society. Murder, arson, rape, mayhem? Sure! I reveiled in 'em. They were to my life what hors d'oeuvres are to a 50-cent table d'hote. I was a scoundrel, a caitiff, a ruffian, a bully, a brutish beast, but I never stayed safely at home in a nice, warm, steam-heated palace 97 miles from the front, kidding the world into believing that all my barbarie savagery was the world up out of the pit of degeneracy to perfection. I may be Attila, Kidd, but, by the living Jingo, I'm not Pecksniff!"

It was at this point that the conversation, singularly enough, was interrupted by the offending editor himself, James Boswell, who in Hades these degenerate days that nobody's safe, nobody is allowed any private life; one may be pure as the undriven soot and not escape calumny."

"But I don't see," began Kidd, scratching his head in perplexity.

"Of course you don't," returned Attila. "But you'd see quick enough if it was you instead of me he'd written about. Come now—let's suppose a similar case with YOU as the hero instead of me. You were a pirate, were you not?" "Ubetcha!" cried Kidd, joyously. "I was the dandiest little old buccanneer that ever sailed the sea. What old whiskerando Van Dyke was to portratture that was I in the gentle art of sending millionaire sailors back to the land to begin all over again. Why, Att," he added, clapping his hand to his dirk handle enthusiastically, "like the Kaiser, I don't want to seem boastful, but, by jingo, old scout, it's nothing but Neptune's truth that even the sharks used to follow my ship around the world just for the pleasure of seeing me "I know," said Attila. "Your record is perfectly familiar to me, and it was the best of its kind. I sometimes think that as a cut-throat you had me skinned the ways for Sunday. But to come to the point—suppose that old jackass Boswell were to print a story on "Where is that hound-where is he?

HERO

Author of "Over the Top" tells of waiting at foot of "Ladders of Death" to charge enemy trenches, of gensations when wounded, of first hearing of guns on Western front, and of emotions when landing in "La Belle France" 1:

O American has seen more fighting at the actual front and lived to tell of it, than Arthur Guy Empey, who enlisted as a private in the British Army at the beginning of the war and served until he was disabled by wounds. His book, "Over the Top," has proved the best seller of all first-hand narratives of the war.

In the following incidents of army life, hitherto unpublished, he tells of the agony of waiting in the trenches for the moment of charging into the inferno of "No Man's Land," of his feelings when wounded repeatedly, of the emotional surge that rose in him when he set foot in "La Belle France," and of his first hearing of the great guns on the Western front.

The "Ladders of Death."

THINK the worst moments I put in during my 18 months in His British Majesty's service were spent at the foot of a scaling ladder before i went over the top for the first time.

In many of the front-line trenches there are scaling ladders-small wooden affairs-placed against the parapet to enable the men to go over the top when the order is given to rush the enemy's trenches. "Ladders of Death" they are called, and there is no question that they are rightly named.

Everything on the west front is done by the clock. That is, an attack is planned days ahead. The artillery begins its deadly work right on the dot. The commanders know exactly at what minute the barrage will be lifted so that the men will be in readiness to go over the top the following moment.

And that is what makes a first trip up the scaling ladder so terrible. Half an hour before the attack ladder so terrible. Half an hour before the attack word is sent down the line, "Thirty minutes to go!" Despite the fact that shells are screaming overhead and every few minutes German trench mortars are dropping "Minnies" close by, that message sends a shudder through your frame. At least, I know that I shuddered, and kept on shuddering until I braced myself with a generous swig of rum.

The bombardment continued—blinding red flare from our guns in the rear, the constant racket of German machine guns in front of us, and every now and again the bursting of a shell a few hundred feet away in No Man's Land.

Again the word was passed down the line.

"'Ow's it a'goin' t' rain with the bloomin' sun a-shinin'," he answered.

"How I would ever climb up the five or six rungs was something I did not know.

minutes to go!" which meant that I had to take my place at the foot of the nearest scaling ladder.

There was no pushing or crowding among my omrades. When it comes to taking one's place at the foot of a scaling ladder the roughest Tommy is the most polite man in the world. It is always "After you, my dear Alphonse," with him.

When I took up my position just beside the ladder I felt ill and faint. In addition to a feeling of nausea my legs seemed paralyzed. How I would ever climb up the five or six rungs was something I did not know. I think I lived hours before we heard the word, "Three minutes to go!" and before the final signal reached my ears I lived months and years.

It was the keenest mental agony I ever experienced-waiting for the blast of the whistle. For I could only crouch at the foot of the ladder and watch the second hand of my timepiece drag around its circle until the signal came to go over.

I had often read about a person's whole life flashing through his mind as he was falling, from a great 'height, and I had always believed it to be the invention of some story-writer. But after waiting in a front-line trench for the lifting of the barrage, with the knowledge that in three minutes I was to start for the German trenches, I revised my opinion of writers.

Actually the signal, when it came, was a great relief. scrambled up the scaling ladder. How I did it never knew, but before I realized it I was over the top and running through the lanes in our barbed wire. I was shouting with my comrades and making for No Man's Land as fast as possible.

No feeling of fear or even nervousness possessed me. Now it all seems to me like a dream, and even at the time it was very unreal. In fact, I seemed to be floating through the air, until I reached the smashed-up barbed wire in front of the German trench. I could hear the crackling of bullets all around me. Men on both sides of me stumbled and fell, but I felt nothing. After those nerve-racking moments at the foot of the scaling ladder I was absolutely numb.

1 Hear the Guns.

T was on a sunny road "somewhere in France" that I got my first taste of war. And this first experience will always remain with me as one of the most thrilling moments of my life. It hap-pened this way: When we had finished our 10 days' intensive training near Rouen we again entrained in cattle cars and traveled 36 hours to the village of F.—, which we knew to be quite near the front. Just how near none of us knew. But as we were ordered to unload our rations and equipment, we knew we would march the rest of the distance.

A more beautiful day than the one on which we left the village of Fa— would be hard to imagine. We marched along the road for several kilos (a kilo is five-eighths of a mile, but with all one's equipment on one's back it seems like five full miles) without any unusual incident. Then, without any warning, a dull rumbling came to my ears. It sounded very much like the surf at Long Beach on a stormy day; but I knew we were far from the ocean and that it must be something else.

'What's the noise?' I asked the man on my left. "I dunno," he replied. "I guess it's goin' to rain."

This reply was so vague that I appealed to our sergeant, a grizzled old veteran.

"Looks like rain, doesn't it?" I asked.
"'Ow's It a'goin' to rain with the bloomin' sun a-shinin'," he answered.

And it was not until then that the truth of the situation dawned upon me. We were within earshot of the guns up the line.

It may seen strange to you here in America that I didn't guess the meaning of that dull rumbling sound. But it wasn't anything like what a had extended. I thought I would be able to recognize the sound of the guns the moment I heard it—I had heard gunfire before. The distance, however, changed the familiar sound into a dull rumbling-more like the surf breaking on a sandy beach than anything else I can think of.

To say I experienced a feeling of fear on learning the cause of this dull rumbling would be an exaggeration. But my knees did seem to wilt, and our sergeant did not cheer me up very much by saying, "Oh, you'll get used to 'em before you gets back to Blighty."

More than one face in my column of fours turned white when the sergeant spoke. If a big shell had dropped in the field alongside our line of march its effect would not have been as depressing as the far-off rumble of the guns.

As we marched along, the dull roar became louder and as it increased in volume I became more reconciled to it. In fact, it wasn't so very long before I had my nerve back and every one else had recovered, too. It was only the first few moments that struck terror into my heart and as such it will never be forgotten.

I Set Foot in France.

NE of the greatest moments in my life came when I stepped from the gangway of our troopship to the quay at the little Freach port where we landed. At last I was "somewhere in France." For months I had looked forward to this moment-not to mention the last five hours which were occupied by the channel crossing. One of my fondest hopes was realized and even if a Frenchman had been there to kiss me I doubt if I would have been annoyed.

The fact that the port where we landed was a gloomy little place and that I was still shaky on my feet as a result of the channel crossing, did not dampen my enthusiasm. I was in "la belle France," and I understood why Frenchmen are willing to die for it.

It may seem strange that such a feeling should come to an American all of a sudden. But I can only say that when my feet first touched French soil as a fighting man I experienced a complete emotional change. Before this I had looked upon my participation in the war more or less as an adventure. Of course, I knew, in an academic way, that there was that has grown up in it, and they enter the training school and attain a high degree of efficiency without once having a demonstration of how to apply restraint. To them it is a relic of medieval times

"The bars, the grating, the screened porches, the jingling bunch of keys are the methods by which the lazy attendant escapes responsibility, the patient pay-ing the price. Coming from a home where perhaps not even the front door is locked, he is suddenly thrown into an abnormal environment. The surroundings are pleasant and the nurse may be considerate, but when the patient looks out of doors he peers through grating or between iron bars, and when he turns to the door he finds it locked. He is in an abnormal environment. Nothing about the place is suggestive of a home.

"A violent rage or a settled melancholia comes over him, requiring restraint and the consequent exhaustion in the one case, and stimulants which only add to the mental disorder in the other. The object of all institutional detention is to restore the patient to the normal state as soon as possible. Then why not give him normal surroundings at the outset? Why add to the mental anguish? What are these groups of paid attendants for if not to take the place of bolts and bars? You say that the barred window inflicts no pain, yet men have sacrificed every dollar they had, millions sometimes, to keep from being detained behind a barred window one hour. You say that restraint is no punishment, yet nations have spilled blood on countless battlefields because citizens of one or the other have been restrained.

"Mechanical restraint is more than punishment.

Long disuse of any member of the body will produce atrophy, and the wearing of a straitjacket, the restraint sheet and other devices limiting the motion of the body disturbs elimination and favors toxic infec-tion and hastens death. It is about the only instance where life is unlawfully taken without penalty. In spite of this fact, we formerly allowed thousands of our unintentional offenders to languish year in and year out in surroundings that would dethrone reason were it not already impaired. The fact that a mental cloud has partly rendered the patient insensible to humiliation does not justify us in humiliating him.

"Plainly, what the insane patient needs is the influence of mind upon mind, teaching and sympathy and correct understanding. Patience, gentleness, reeducation, leadership, courage and strength must all play a part in the restoration, and these virtues are not administered with a teaspoon or squirted through the needle of the hypodermic syringe, nor are they applied with wristlets and straitjackets nor held in with bars and gratings.

Of the substitution of women for men nurses in Illinois asylums, Dr. Zeller says: "The superiority of women over men as attendants for the insane requires no defense. It is coming to be universally recognized and would proceed even faster if precedent, that stumbling block to progress, were not in the way."

in the corps of intelligence police will wear the button shown in Figure 5, on the left side of the collar. The device for a military aeronaut differs somewhat from the aviator's insignia. The shield with "U. S." surcharged upon it is exchanged for a balloon, as shown in Figure 6, while the observer's device is shown in Figure 7. The machine gun battalions are also probably destined to play a very important part in the war. Figures 8 and 10, show the buttons worn by enlisted men in the machine gun battalions. Figure 8 would be the button for the left side of the collar and Figure 10 for the right side of the collar, showing that the soldier was a member of the National Army, and the machine gun battalion of the 348th Regiment. The officers' device which should be worn on both sides of the collar for the same regiment, is shown in Figure 9. The chemical service is also an entirely new branch of service. Officers will wear the "cut-outs" shown in Figure 11 on both sides of the collar, while enlisted men will wear the button shown in Figure 12, on the left side of the collar. Field clerks of the Quartermaster's corps and the Adjutant-General's Department will now wear two crossed pens above the device, indicating their branch of the service.

like that of ancient Central America and Yucatan, scientists today are beginning to link the races together more and more. It is possible, they believe, that a branch of these Toltecs and Mayas, fleeing from famine and the Aztecs, followed the streams northward for better pasture and more bison until they finally established this crude underground emptre in the Missouri

When Dr. Stearns of the Peabody Museum of Harvard and Dr. Gilder of the University of Nebraska make their final reports, more will be known about this strange people.

Were it not for one peculiarity of these caves, practically all relics of value in the research work would have been destroyed by the ravages of time. This peculiarity was in the construction of the cave. In one corner of each is found a cache, some four feet deep, bottle-shaped, with the neck securely plugged up with burnt clay. The inside of the bottle-shaped cache was well charred by fire, so that the cavity is to this day dry and free from the ravage of decay. It is in these places that most of the pottery, human bones, works of art, sculpture, beads, combs and bone implements are found.

Forbid a person, especially a wask one, to do something ways to do it, simply because it is forbidden. In these propositions it he something of the idea of the modern treatment of the insane, as exemplified at the Alton State Hospital, the newest of the nine illinois institutions for the care of the mentally alling. The hospital is the first to be built anywhere with an entire absence of means of restraint. There is no lock to be employed, however, and the pice where a patient may be shit up, no fastening of any sort for patients, and no screen or bar on any window. The patients go about the place at will, working at appointed tasks if they wish to do so, idling if they do not. Under the new method of treatment outbreaks of the any sort are decreasing in frequency. The patient the who now becomes temporarily "violent" is quieted with place as little forces as possible, and then is restored to freedom. The chances of a fresh outbreak are thus diminished, whereas straps or a cell usually increased the little forces as possible, and then is restored to freedom. She has been cured of this habit but her mind remains clouded. She writes an average of a poem daily of about the quality of the following verses:

Make me a Voice, O, God of my father, Make me a Voice that revels in song! In harmony free all the world I'd see—

A world that is twisted and all gone wrong—
A voice of love through the discord piercing, Making sweet music the whole day long.

Give me a Light, O, God of my father:
Sun of my soul that shineth above!
O, let me bear it that others may share it!
Kindle it there at Thy altar of love,
There where the fires forever are flaming:
Peace will it bring like the home-faring dove.

That Thy feet I am learning life's lesson:
Much hast Thou taken and much canst Thou give.

truth and justice in the cause of the allies, but I did not feel it deeply. But when I put foot on French soil for the first time I felt the nobility of our cause. Nor was the feeling peculiar to me. I believe nearly every man in our regiment experienced the same psychological change. Many of my comrades spoke about it, although few wefe able to explain how it came about.

Now, before I went to London I had very little use for the English. I was brought up the the average American boy, and the average Englishman, to my mind, was a red-coated Britisher of 1776. I felt that the English didn't like us, and I didn't hesitate to say so. However, a few weeks in the British army completely revised my ideas. I found the average British soldier the best sport in the world. And don't let anyone tell you that an Englishman has no sense of humor. The English have the greatest sense of humor in the world.

In the same way the English Tommies were prejudiced against the French. Before a British soldier lands in France he has little use for the "frog eaters," as he calls them. But once his feet touch French soil he loses his prejudices and he assimilates something of the French spirit of "la belle France."

The first night we arrived in France we slept in the open on the side of a road, but our spirits were high and we were genuinely happy. At 6 o'clock in the morning we were ordered to entrain—not in passenger cars, but in dinky little cattle cars. Forty men were packed in each car like sardines—only more so, and it was 48 hours before we detrained at Rouen. But hardly suryone uttered a complaint.

We were in "la belle France," and the feeling of exultation I experienced when I first stepped on French soil did not die out until our intensified training began several days later. New "Empeyisms"

Crossing the Channel.

HAVE crossed the ocean many times. I have spent many days and nights on ships in the barred zone, expecting to be torpedoed at any moment. But my five-hour trip across the British Channel on one of his Majesty's troop ships will always linger in my memory as one of the most trilling experiences in my life. The strangest part of it is that the sea was as smooth as glass and there was not a single submarine in sight. Nevertheles, I was seasick throughout the entire trip, and if there had been a hundred submarines all about us, I couldn't have felt more certain of being sent to the bottom.

It all happened because we were ordered to put on life beits and keep them on throughout the crossing. We detrained at Southampton, and in columns of twos we marched up the gangplank of the troop ship which was lying alongside the dock. As I had crossed the Channel several times and had never-been seasick, I did not dread that feature of the trip; and an escort of swift destroyers gave me confidence that even if our ship was torpedoed there would be no doubt about been ing picked up.

But my troubles began when we were ordered to line ourselves along both rails of the ship and put on the line ourselves along both rails of the ship and put on the line ourselves along both rails of the ship and put on the line ourselves along both rails of the ship and put on the line ourselves along both rails of the ship and put on the line ourselves along both rails of the ship and put on the outral of the dock. One of my comrades tried to the stream asked to make matters worse, the ship was still at the dock. One of my comrades tried that the cheer me with a funny story about a seasick sailor. It is exteremed several hours of agony we got the contrary." But I was in no mood for laughing.

After what seemed several hours of agony we got to the contrary." But I was in no mood for laughing.

After what seemed several hours of agony we got to the contrary." But I was ship was steady as the largest occan liner, my feeling of nausea increased. It is exteremly doubtful if a single British troop is hip has been torpedoed while crossing the Channel had a been informed of my presence on this particular troop whip and been given explicit orders by the Kaiser him and that every submarine captain the German navy had been informed of my presence on this particular troop whip and been given explicit orders by the Kaiser him and that every short crossing from Southampton—but it seemed five days, and I experienced more anguish, both mental and physical, during the crossing than my barden and the front, with their discomforts and danger that gives a soldier his worst fears. Like many others, as I look back on it, I have had a lot of troubles, but "most of them never hap-had accomment of the many others, pened."

But the thrill of this Channel crossing will always linger in my memory as the most tisagreeable experience in my life. I would rather be shot at synrise than go through it again.

ROBABLY no question is asked of the returned soldier more often than "How does it feel to be wounded?"

Now, no generalization is wholly true, not even this one. But in my opinion a severe wound is not as painful, at the time of being inflicted. I mean, as a slight one. I have seen men suffer 10 times as much from a wounded finger as from a bullet in the chest.

In my own case I know that I did not feel any real in my own case I know that I did not feel any real in my own case I know that I did not feel any real pain when I was struck in the shoulder by a bullet. I felt as if I had been hit, of course, but it was like a dull, heavy blow—not sharp or painful. It was a sout of a nervous shock, and my left side went numb. But I can honestly say that I didn't suffer—at the time. Many months later I was wounded a second time—this time in the cheek. A bullet hit me on the left side of my face, less than an inch below my eye. But it was not painful—at the moment.

It happened during a trench raid in the dark. It was the darkness and not the wound, that made the incident so terrible. As I said before, I did not feel any real pain when the bullet hit me. But the shock made me fall forward, and I struck the ground with

I knew I had been hit in the face, and the first thing I did was to feel the spot with my hand. When I took my hand away and felt it covered with blood I knew I had been badly wounded, and my first thought was for my first-aid dressing. It was so dark that I could not see anything, and I had to feel for my packet. By this time my brain seemed to clear, and without much difficulty I got to my feet and started back to our lines. While I could feel the warm blood trickling down my neck, and while every time I put my hand to my face it became sticky with blood, I did not suffer any pain.

On my way back to our lines I was struck in the left arm by a bullet, but it only felt as it someone had punched me in the back. However, my left side soon went numb and I was forced to sit down.

While I was trying to use my first-aid dressing again I was overcome by that feeling of loneliness that had overtaken me on previous occasions. It was dark; I was almost helpless. I think I suffered more mental agony from that lonely feeling out there in No Man's Land than at any time during my months at the front.

However, I managed to struggle to my feet again and I staggered on toward our lines—but not before I had hurled all my bombs in the direction of the German Irench. In the darkness I stimbled over the barbed wire entanglements, tearing my uniform and lacerating my hands and legs. And I want to say that I felt those cuts much more than the builet wounds.

As luck would have it, a third builet hit me—this time in the left shoulder, only half an inch from my old wound. I only felt a slight blow at the moment, but it was too much of a nervous shock. A moment later I fell unconscious.

When I came to I was in a shell hole, pretty well covered with blood. And it was the tremendous loss of blood that caused me to faint again. When I woke up I was in an advanced first-aid post, and a doctor was bending over me. Thirty-six hours had delapsed, and my shoulder was paning terribly. My face was aching, and there was a burning sensation in my left arm. But that was the first genuine pain that I experienced as a result of my wounds. And in talking with many wounded men I discovered that my experience was typical.

However, one experiences enough pain in the hospital to more than make up for what is lacking when a builet strikes one on the battlefield.

Delving Into the Identity of a Strange Race

An alleged pre-historic cave-dwelling cannibal, reproduced at the University of Nebraska.

EFORE William the Norman sunk his spurs in English sod, perhaps even before Caesar trampled the heart of Gaul into the dust, a crude empire flourished in the Missouri Valley, between St. Louis and Sioux City.

The history of this empire has never been written. The existence of it was not known until a few years ago, when Robert F. Gilder, field archeologist of the University of Nebraska, began to uncover the remains of the community caves in which these strange people once dwelt.

Gradually evidence of their crude art and their strange practices is being unearthed. Hundreds of specimens of their implements, their sculpture, their clay modeling, their ornaments and the combs with which they groomed their coarse hair, have already been uncovered and are now in the museum of the Omaha Public Library and Eastern museums.

But who were these people, so much above the modern Indian in arts and sculpture?

Why did they construct their caves in perfect rectangles always averaging 20 by 40 feet in dimensions? How, indeed, did they remove the great volume of earth necessary to construct such a cave from four to seven feet deep?

Why did they devour each other in a fertile valley where bison were abundant, as is shown by the fossil remains of bison shoulder blades and other bone imple-

Where did they learn sculpture? What implements or delicate tools did they use to carve ut the soapstone busts with exquisite detail, shough no more than three-quarters of an inch in height? Who taught them the astronomy and mathematics that made it possible for them to build every cave in a perfect rectangle and lay it exactly square with the compass?

Did they come up from Mexico in the eleventh century, a peace-loving and partly cultured people, driven forth by the famine and the fiercer tribe of war-like Aztecs?

Several universities are seeking to solve this mystery through the aid of the meager circumstantial evidence found in the deep, dry caches of the cave ruins. The University of Nebraska has worked for years on the subject. The Peabody Museum of Harvard University has for the past several years sent a quiet expedition each year to work tirelessly through the summer gathering what material can be found on the subject. Both last sum-mer and the summer of 1916 a Peabody expedition labored throughout the valley under the head of Dr. Frederick H. Stearns, director of the Peabody Museum. Over 1000 pounds of material has been collected. This is to be washed, cleaned, studied and classified at the home museum, where each year the collection is to be added to until science will be able to give the world some definite statement as to

There are still conflicting theories as to the time in history when this race flourished. By some it is believed they inhabited the valAlthough they had a knowledge of mathematics and were skilled in sculpture, pottery and other arts, these prehistoric people, who inhabited the Missouri valley, practiced cannibalism — By means of a system worked out by German scientists their features have been restored by utilizing the skulls found in their caves-Date of their presence here in question, but they probably were refugees from famine and the Aztecs in Central America ley between 2000 and 4000 years ago. By others it is held that they must have been in the valley as late as the tenth or eleventh century.

In support of the first theory it is pointed out that from two to four feet of black soil has accreted on the surface of the ground over the fallen cave roof. Darwin once made an experiment in a secluded spot to learn how fast soil would accumulate from falling vegetable mold. He found that less than an inch acmumulated in 30 years. Rapid calculation will then show that a great lapse of years must have taken place to allow four feet of such soil to accumulate.

Again, oak trees 400 years old have been found growing squarely over what was once the cave site.

A pink soapstone head less than an inch in height, now in the museum at Omaha, has attracted the widest attention of archeologists and ethnologists. The careful carving reveals some knowldge of sculpturing. Then, too, the features reveal a distinct type of human being, much resembling either the ancient Maya or Toltec faces as revealed in the ruins of lower Mexico, or even resembling somewhat the Egyptian faces as revealed in the tombs and recesses of the pyramids.

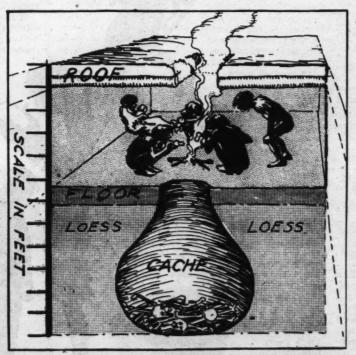

Many tiny busts of burnt clay or terra cotta, less than half the size of a man's fist, have been found in the caves by Dr. Stearns and Dr. Gilder. there is present in these the gaping mouth which strongly suggests the faces of the rain gods of ancient Mexico. They resemble also the many terra cotta masks and idols constantly being plowed up in the fields surrounding Teotihuacan.

Do these clay busts and soapstone carvings represent types of the races that made them?

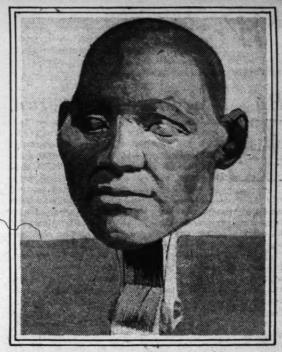

Ethnologists and archeologists believe they do. It is noteworthy that all Chinese gods have the slanting eyes. All Egyptian busts and paintings reveal the characteristic huge aquiline nose and the ear guards in tures, with prominent, heavy facial bones, particularly the cheek bones and the angle of the jaw.

Exact reproduction of the faces of two individuals of this lost race have been made at the College of Medicine of the University of Nebraska. This has been done by means of a new German system of exact facial measurements, whereby a face of clay or plast:lena may be accurately modeled over the surface of a given skull.

The skulls of Schiller and Bach, as well as those of other noted Germans whose burial places were a matter of some dispute, were absolutely identified by this system in Germany some years ago. A tremendously complicated table of facial measurements, covering principally the average thic ness of flesh on thousands of points of the bones of the face and skull, was prepared by the German scientists.

It was from this table that Dr. C. W. M. Poynter, head of the department of anatomy of the University of Nebraska, and his assistant, Miss Myra Warner, worked on the skulls furnished them by Field Archeologist Gilder. The accompanying photographs show the faces they have thus built over the skulls of these cave dwellers of the Missouri Valley empire of centuries ago.

Strange as it may seem, this race of people mingled with their smattering of art and science the revolting custom of cannibalism.

Some six feet beneath the surface of the ground today is found what was once the cave floor. It is packed hard with the tramping of many feet, and is charred in many places from numerous camp fires.

A spot of decomposed ash is always found near the center of the floor, showing where the principal camp fire was kept. In some of the caves Mr. Gilder has found a smooth stone anvil near this fire. It is dished somewhat where stone hammers have wor'ed long upon it. Near this crude anvil, in some instances, have been found crude stone hammers, smooth with much use.

Then around this anvil and hammers are often found fragments of human bone that show clearly they have been charred in the fire and mashed with the stone hammer.

The conclusion is that here about this central slab of stone sat sinewy warriors, hammer in hand, mashing bones and sucking human marrow, while in darker corners naked mothers crooned weird songs and suckled savage babies.

Looking at the dim history of the Toltecs of Mexico and Central America from the seventh century to 1064, we find that the terrible drouths and famines of the eleventh century gave rise to the practice of such human sacrifices.

It is at this point in the march of centuries that the curtain of oblivion is drawn over the Toltecs and Mayas. History at this point merely records that they fled from the famine and living fury of the fierce Aztec warriors jest then charging over the horizon of history.

They fled, we know, to Central America, to ucatan and to other parts unknown.

NEW INSIGNIA OF UNITED STATES ARMY

At that moment, to effect Mrs. Haslett's adherence to her original purpose, Oakley would cheerfully have been accounted the dullest of bores, but perception had come too late. Vaulting ambition had o erleaped itself, and he had now no choice but to satisfy the lady's appetite for more of his agreeable society. could never afterward remember what they talked about on the way across town, but by the time they reached the Grand Central Station his resolution was taken. Confession and explanation were out of the question with this woman, back of whose gracious and kindly manner one perceived always a certain stateliness of bearing, no more to be ignored than it was to be deliberately affronted. Having shouldered the undertaking, he must carry it on, leaving its outcome on the knees of the gods, who had thus far included him in the protection extended to children, drunkards and

Who

Arrived at the station, Mrs. Haslett remained in the cab, while he sent her telegram, engaged her berth, and left her bag to be called for, pocketing the check. He looked over the great waiting room, with some vague idea of assaulting any big man he might see and demanding his trousers or his life; but a monotonous average in the size of men left the thought still embryonic.

When the cab was on its way, he said:

"Since we are neither of us in gala attire. I have told the man to drive to a rather out-of-the-way restaurant that I know, where the cooking is excellent and the rooms quiet. I hope you'll not find it stupid."

"I shall find it delightful," she graciously declared.

Oakley bade the cabman wait, and was given the customary carriage check. In the restaurant he chose a corner table, and himself took the corner chair, where he attempted for the first time a feat that he had often seen women perform. Seating himself in his ulster, he unfastened all but the two lower but-tons, and with the waiter's help, wriggled out of the shoulders, keeping the skirts about his legs the while. When the man would have taken the coat away, he objected; and then unable entirely to ignore the surprise in Mrs. Haslett's glance, he added, rather lamely:

'With your permission, I'll keep this about me, Mrs. Haslett. Don't you find it chilly here? I seem to be shivering."

Which, in a sense, was true. He was shivering. His compánion, however, was alarmed lest he had taken a cold, and solicitously insisted upon his drinking a cocktail, to ward off possible evil effects from exposure to the rain. With the ulster firmly wrapped about his legs and the tablecloth pulled over it as an additional screen. Oakley, in his corner, felt reasonably safe for the moment, and so began what proved to be a long and a merry and memorable dinner.

They constantly discovered fresh points of common interest, and again Oakley congratulated himself that he had not permitted appearances to frighten him out of attempting the seemingly impossible. Over the coffee they grew confidential. She told him of the boy she had lost; and he showed her the two pictures of Alice which he always carried, and touched lightly upon his desire to bring his wife back to New York, where her girlhood had been spent.

Mrs. Haslett talked of her husband, of his contemplated gradual retirement from active business, and of his search for men in whose hands he could eventually safely place his affairs. Finally she spoke frankly of Oakley himself, and of Mr. Haslett's spinion of him.

"He tells me," she said, "that you have three of the four qualifications which he thinks essential for a successful business man. You have imagination, which stands for originality and resource and initiative; you have dignity—perhaps poise is the better word; and you are absolutely truthful. If you prove also to have good judgment, there is no reason why your future should not be very bright."

Oakley flushed slightly as he replied: "I can't tell you how highly I value Mr. Haslett's good opinion." Well, you have it. This is very direct, but I think it sometimes helps to know these things. ticularly admires your truthfulness. He told me fecently that he had seen you in some embarrassing crisis, where the average man would have sought refuge at least in evasion, and that, to his delight, you were absolutely frank and open. We believe-he and I-that in the end truth must always prevail, and I thought you might like to know that yours had not been fruitless. "Thank you. I don't like to lie," said he, simply.

The talk drifted on to other things, but Oakley's spirit was jubilant, and the radiance had returned hovering vision of his wife. There moment of embarrassment, to be sure, when the bill was presented and he absently felt for the billbook in his hip pocket, but his false motion was not noticed. He wriggled back into his ulster without attracting particular attention and followed Mrs. Haslett to the door, devoutly thankful that his last ordeal was over and that ahead there lay only the plainest of sailing. Looking out from the glassed vestibule, they discovered that it had turned colder, and that the rain, freezing as it fell, had made of the streets and sidewalks smooth sheets of ice. The porter had gone a few steps down the street, where he stood chatting with a policeman and watching he reharnessing of a horse that had fallen.

"If you'll wait here a moment," said Oakley, "I'll get the cab and return to help you down.

He failed at first to attract the porter's attention, and had carefully descended the icy steps before the man saw him and hastened forward to get the carriage check. As Oakley turned to go back a careless, hurrying messenger boy jostled him. Oakley slipped, staggered, flung out a foot in a vain effort to retain his balance, and went down heavily. The boy, instinctively seizing the only thing within reach, which happened to be the flying skirt of the long ulster, on a foot or two, plunging, and also fell, peeling the coat up over Oakley's unprotected legs as the husk is torn from an ear of corn, the detaining buttons yielding to superior force. A brilliant electric sign lighted the scene perfectly; and as Oakley sat up and dragged the coat again over his blue and white pajamas he was conscious of but one thing-that was the frozen horror in Mrs. Haslett's face as she watched him from the vestibule. The next instant the police-man twisted a hand in his collar and jerked him rough-

"You're a nice one, you are!" exclaimed that func tionary, severely. "Making an exhibition of yourself in the public streets! You come along with me.'

"Don't overstep your authority, officer," suggested Oakley, brushing himself off and twitching his clothes into place. "I'm not liable to arrest."
"Y'ain't? Huh! Don't you try any funny business with me. I saw ye!" "Since when has it been a crime for a man to lose his balance?"

"That's all right. Disorderly conduct for yours! I tell ye I saw ye! You come along without any back talk, now. Then, as his glance caught Mrs. Haslett, he added: "That woman with you?"
"No," said Oakley.

"Humph! You were calling a cab. I'll be bound there's a pair of ye!" Keeping his hold on his prisoner, he imperatively beckoned to Mrs. Haslett, who reluctantly approached, assisted by the porter. She was very pale, and the kindly glow was gone from her eyes, leaving them cold and steely.

Oakley's mind was working rapidly, and he covertly extracted a roll of bills from his pocket and kept them in his hand, although as he watched the policenan he decided not to attempt that sort of thing with him. The man was obviously a powerful and unreasoning machine that nothing short of political influence could stop in mid-career.

"Do you know this man?" demanded the officer of Mrs. Haslett.

"I've already told you that the lady is not with me," glibly interposed Oakley, before she could reply.
"I never saw her before."
"That'll do from you," said the policeman. "He was calling your carriage, wasn't he?

"Certainly I was." Again Oakley took up the narra-ve. "Now, just listen a minute. I was standing in tive. the vestibule when this lady came out of the restaurant, and from my being there-and perhaps from my long coat—I suppose she took me to be the porter, who was yonder, talking to you. At any rate, she handed me her carriage check, and I brought it down and gaveit to the porter here, as any man would have done in the circumstances. That's all there is to it. I repeat, I do not know the lady. I never saw her before, and I'm very sorry to be the cause of even a moment of embarrassment to her."

Stealing a glance at her, he was convinced that his ready lying had destroyed whatever might have remained of her regard for him after the revelations of his tumble; and yet, he must at any cost prevent her being drawn further into this dilemma.

"Hm! You're a smooth one!" commented the skep-tical policeman, who had been watching Mrs. Haslett's face. "Did they come together?" he asked the

As yet uncertain of the denomination of a bill slipped into his fingers while the policeman studied Haslett, the porter merely said he didn't re-

At that moment their cab drove up, and the officer turned to the driver, fixing a stern glance upon him.

"Cabby," said he, "ye brought these two here together, didn't ye?"

With the hand farthest from the policeman Oakley displayed a $10 bill, crushed it, dropped it, and set

"No, sir," intelligently replied the cabman. "I brought the lady alone. I got her at Twenty-third street, drove her to the Grand Central, and then here. She told me to wait."

"Hm!" said the policeman. All right. There's something queer about this—but you can go." He nodded to Mrs. Haslett. "I guess you're all right. You just made a mistake in your man."

the United States

"Yes," she said. "Evidently I made a mistake in my man. I'm sorry."

"Oh, I don't know," affably rejoined the policeman. "He's a smooth one; and if you hadn't we might not have caught him." "That's true, too. Perhaps it's just as well. Goodnight, officer.'

The driver got down from his box to help her into the cab, and before he remounted he stooped to pick ur something from the sidewalk where Oakley had

On the way to the station house the prisoner's reflections were of the gloomiest, and presently the one ray of comfort remaining to him-the consciousness that Mrs. Haslett was on her way, uninvolved and unhindered—was swallowed by the black recollection that he had in his pocket the check, without which she would have great difficulty in getting her bag. And she would have little time to spare. He started up, saw the answering movement of the policeman guarding the open end of the patrol wagon, and settled back hopelessly. He 'had messed things!

"Name?" indifferently asked the Desk Sergeant at the station.

"John Williams." The Sergeant glanced at him keenly, but wrote the name.

'Address?"

"Great States Hotel." "Charge?"

"He's no pants on," said the policeman who had brought him in.

What!" The Sergeant looked up incredulously. "Now, here!" said Oakley, stepping back to afford a full view of his coated figure. "I look all right, "You certainly do." The Sergeant's tone warmed with the appreciation he always gave to physical perfection.

"But his pants ain't real," continued his subordinate. "They're only shams. They don't go much above his knees, Doyle says. He sent him in."
"Well, what of it?" boldly demanded Oakley. "If a man wears a-what you call a 'dicky,' and it gets ripped off him in an accident, you don't arrest him for wearing a shirt, do you?"

"But pants is different," urged the policeman.
"No, they're not. They just-seem different. You say yourself I look all right." "Have you had an accident?" asked the Sergeant, whose black-lashed, blue eyes were beginning to twinkle, although he in no way relaxed the official severity of his manner. "Accident? No! What I've had is no accident!

It's been a regular landslide! And for the love of heaven, get this over and let me go, or there'll be one more calamity. I'll put up anything you like. There's my money, there's my watch and chain, there's a scarf pin that's valuable, though perhaps it doesn't look it. Take them all as security and give me an hour's freedom. Then I'll come back and you can do anything you like with me. You'll do that, won't you?" 'Is John Williams your name?'

"No, of course it isn't. I'll tell you what my name is, if you like-but I'd rather you wouldn't write it down there," he added, glancing at the book.

"Never mind," said the Sergant. "Go on. Tell your story—and tell it straight."

So Oakley told his story, and he told it straight, suppressing only Mrs. Haslett's name. Moreover, he told it to Irishmen. It may be added that during the narration official gravity and decorum suffered somewhat.

"There you have it," he finished. "Now take my security and let me go long enough to get that poor woman her bag and start her for Boston. Send me under guard if you like, only give me that much time. Will you?'

"I'll do better than that," declared the Sergeant. "D'ye think I've been here so long I don't know an honest man when I see him? Take your stuff, sir. I'll not detain ye. While I'm whistlin' for a cab for ye, Casey here'll take ye upstairs and give ye a pair o' my pants, lest ye fall again, sir. We're about of a size, I think."

Oakley impulsively pulled a bill from the roll already in his hand, and then slowly returned it. A moment later he handed his open cigar case to the Sergeant. "Thank ye, sir, I don't mind if I do. 'Tis a good one, by the smell. Ye can return the pants at yer leisure, sir. Sure, that's all right. 'Tis a pleasure, Fortunately, the drive to the Grand Central Station was not long, and the horse was not only sure-footed and well shod, but fast.

He was in good spirits. Not only was the business that had brought him to New York moving smoothly, but he thought he detected evidences of an undercurrent favorable to his plans. For one thing, Mr. Haslett's letter asking him to meet Mrs. Haslett at Jersey City that night and take her across town to the Grand Central Station, while unimportant in itself, was not insignificant, for Warren Haslett was not a man to incur any obligation, however slight, unless he had definite plans for discharging it; and this was not the first time he had indicated a friendly confidence in Ned Oakley, although, as their social acquaintance was slight, he had never before asked service of so personal a nature.

It was well known that Mr. Haslett was ever on the alert to find energetic and able young men for his business, and rumors had recently reached Oakley that there was soon to be a vacancy in the New York office—one which he felt himself qualified to fill; hence it was not strange that his head should be full of speculations as to a possible connection between these facts and the increasing favor shown him by the older man. He was smiling tenderly at the vision, back of all these hopes and plans, of Alice's face, when he should tell her—if he should tell her—that they were to live in New York, when the telephone bell rang.

"Baltimore wants you," said the operator; and a moment later a man's voice inquired: "That you oakley? This is Warren Haslett. Did you get my ketter today?"

"Yes. I ought to have wired you that I did."

Still smiling, Oakley went to his suitcase, which he had not fully unpacked. Contrary to his custom, and against Alice's advice, he had brought no trunk, as this was to be purely a business trip, and a hur-ried one at that; and because she had failed to give him everything he had needed on a previous journey, he had humorously insisted upon doing his own pack-

Helplessly surveying the room, his glance fell on the long drawers of the dresser, and within 30 seconds every drawer in the room, large and small, had been jerked open, disclosing amptiness.

Taking down the telephone receiver, he urged, as the operator responded:

Once more he opened the wardrobe, this time briskly shaking the meek pa-

"Did you bring my trousers" demanded Oakley, opening the door a crack.

"Tousers? No, sir. Did you send them down?"

"Holy Moses! No! I didn't send them down! But semebody took them, and I want them—want them quick, too! Understand?"

"Yes, sir, but— When did you send them, sir?"

"Yes, sir. Perhaps the chambermaid"—

"No, sir. Perhaps the chambermaid set in the room?"

"Yes, sir. I'll ask the chambermaid they're got to have them! I'm to meet a lady at 7:53 in Jersey City, and I've no time to lose. Now, you hustle!"

"Yes, sir. I never take a gentleman's things, sir, unless they're left out for me. You're sure they're not in the room?"

"Well, It they are, I can't find them. Come in and see if you can." He flung the door open with one hand and reached for the telephone with the other. "Give me the desk and hurry my," he said. "That the deal? Well, there's a pair of trousers missing from room 637. The valet says he hasn't seen them. Now, is there anybody else in this hotel who— What?

No, he's here now, hunting for them, but they're not here. She says not. That's all very well, but, I can't wait for any deliberate official investigations. I want those trousers, and I want them now! All right. Come up if you want to, but hustle! I've got to catch a train."

"Would it be possible, sir. if you're got to take the outes in which to paroduce the trousers and get me out of this hotel," he announced. "I've got to take the outes in which to paroduce the trousers and get me out of this hotel," he announced. "I've got to take the outes in the mont, about half in hotel pair." "You don't know the address? But the name, sir?"
"I don't know that, either. My friend King recmmended him. He's his tailor. He telephoned"——
"Yes, sir; but your friend? Mr. King? We can telehone him"——

"I don't know where King lives, He's in one of those uptown apartment houses, and his name's not in the telephone book. I heard him say so today. Isn't that the very devil!"

One of the clerks arrived at that moment, and the situation was explained to him afresh. He was polite, even deferential, to Oakley, and searchingly questioned the valet, the chambermaid and boots. "Of course I'm sure I brought them," blazed Oakley, in response to diplomatic suggestion. "What do you take me for? Haven't I told you I packed them myself? I left them in that—By George!"

In that instant he had remembered the mystifying postscript of a letter he had received from Alice that morning. "ailing to grasp its meaning at once, he had dismissed it from his mind, intending to study it out when the claims of business were less pressing. Now he went to his coat and got the letter.

Very cautiously the Crown Prince unlocked the door, stepped precariously to the lower shelf of the cabinet, hung there by one royal hand and lifted the dog down.

Hedwig, of all people!

She hated her. She had always hated her. For her youth, first; later, when she saw how things were going, for the accident that had made her a granddaughter to the King.

Even this last June, when Karl had made her a granddaughter to the summer palace where the court had been in residence, he had already had the thing in mind. Even when his arms had been about her, Olga Loschek, he had been looking over her shoulder, as it were, at Hedwig. He had had it all in his wicked head, even then. For Karl was wicked. None would know it better than she, who was risking everything, life itself, for him. Wicked, ungrateful and unscrupulous. She loathed him while she loved him. Hedwig would marry Karl. She might be troublesome, would, indeed, almost certainly be troublesome, would have given her soul, this in itself was hateful. But there was more. The Countess saw much with her curiously wide, almost childishly bland eyes; it was only now that it occurred to her to turn what she knew of Hedwig and Nikky to account. She stopped pacing the floor and sat down. Suppose Hedwig, she felt, would have the courage even for that. That would stop things. But Hedwig did not trust her. And there was about Nikky a dog-like quality of devotion, which warned her that, the deeper his love for Hedwig, the more unlikely he would be to bring her to disgrace. Nikky might be difficult.

"The fool!" said the Countess Annunciata and her henched leeth. To both the Archduchess Annunciata and her henched leeth. To both the Archduchess Annunciata and her henched said said the Countess and themselves.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto listened, and Oskar waited. And something that had been joyous and singing in a small boy's heart was suddenly still.

"I had forgotten about that," he said.

Then Miss Braithwaite rose, and the Prince put his heels together with a click, and bowed, as he had been taught to do.

At the door Prince Ferdinand William Otto furned and bowed again. Then he went out, and the door closed behind him.

He washed himself, with Oskar standing by, holding a great soft towel. Even the towels were too large. He brushed his teeth, and had two drinks of water, because a stiffish feeling in his throat persisted. And at last he crawled up into the high bed that was much too big for him, and had to crawled out again, because he had forgotten his prayers.

When everything was done, and the hour of putting out the light could no longer be delayed, he said good-night to Oskar, who bowed. There was a great deal of bowing in Otto's world. Then, whisk' it was dark, with only the moon face of the cathedral clocked of the bounds drooped until it looked like a face with a cruel mouth, and was really very poor company.

He gave Miss Braithwaite time to go to her sitting room, and for 8 o'clock to pass, because once every hour, all night, a young gentleman of the court, appointed for this purvose and dubbed a "wet nurse" by treat," he read. "I wear 53-4 gloves, you know, and I like them long. I have been told that trousers can be kept in fairly good condition without pressing if one places them carefully between the mattresses every night. 'It is to laugh!' Ha, ha!"

He stared at the words, incredulously rereading them, and Alice's dancing eyes and mischievous mouth mocked him from every space. It will be remembered that he had insisted upon packing that suitcase himself.

The clerk protested that he was very sorry; he would do his best to find the missing garments; the affair was most unfortunate and incomprehensible; such a thing had never happened before in the history of the

"Never mind. I guess I've found the solution. It's on me, all right." Oakley laughed rather sheepishly. "I thought I packed them—but I didn't. Another case of 'You never can tell.' Now, see here: I'm in a deuce of a hole. Help me out, will you? I'm pledged to meet a lady in Jersey City at 7:53. I've got to meet her, that's all there is about it! And I must have a pair of trousers in 10 minutes. Now, what can you Really, the clerk and the valet didn't know. They recognized that the situation was awkward; and while they were in no sense responsible for it, they would cheerfully do anything in their power to be of service. "Thank you. That's very nice—but it isn't trousers," said Oakley. "How far is it to the nearest clothier's? Can't you send"-

"No use. Every shop is closed at this hour."

"Borrow a pair for me."
"Impossible, sir!"

"Nothing's impossible! Man alive, I can't go this way! There must be somebody in this hotel who he extra trousers about. Borrow some. Steal them, if you must, but get them!"

'Couldn't we send someone else to meet the lady? It could be explained that you were ill, or

"No, it couldn't, for I telephoned the lady's husband, not half an hour ago, that I would certainly meet her. Important matters—business affairs, understand?—hang on my keeping this appointment. Can't you see it's serious? Do something!"

The little clerk looked up at Oakley, towering above him, and shrugged his shoulders.

"If you were of an average size, it might be possible, but'

"Well, I'm not of an average size. I'm 6 feet 2 and weigh 247. There's a man down at the end of this corridor who's as big as I am. Go and get" 'Impossible! Quite impossible!

"Well, do something!"

The clerk and the valet departed, and Oakley charged about the room raging and impotent. Even had he been willing to lie, a plea of sudden illness would have been an obvious artifice from a man of his invariable health, and he felt that to confess the truth-the idiotic, humiliating truth-to Warren Haslett, would be deliberately to brand himself as an irresponsible fool and to lose a great part of the confidence he had won. For his own part, he could take his medicine; when a man makes an ass of himself he deserves to eat husks, but Alice-the tender vision-face of his wife grew wistful as his air castles tottered over their shaking foundation, and he savagely struck his fist against a window casing.

Then he sat on the edge of the bed, regarded his trouserless legs and gave way to peals of sardonic laughter. After which he fell again to walking the floor, muttering execrations upon his own carelessness

The valet rapped sharply and entered, a pair of dark trousers over his arm.

"I know they're too small, sir," he admitted, as Oakley seized them hopefully and held them up in derisive despair, "but they're all I can get. They belong to the clerk. We thought perhaps-would you be willing to try them, sir? Oakley struggled into the garments, which not only refused to reach his waist, but rose to a point midway between his knee and his ankle at the bottom.

"Is that the best you can do?" he demanded.

Last

"The very best, sir. I have some trousers down in the pressing room, and while it would be as much as my position is worth to let you have any of them. I-I went to see. sir. But it was no use. The gentlemen all seem to be small. These are the best I could get."

Oakley was looking fixedly at his long ulster, hanging on the rack, and fantastic schemes were forming in his brain. After all, it would be only to cross town in a cab, and perhaps to spend a few minutes in the waiting rooms at the stations.

"You're sure these belong to the clerk?" he questioned. "I don't want to get you into trouble.'

were of any use to you, sir. you were welcome to them." "Is it still raining?

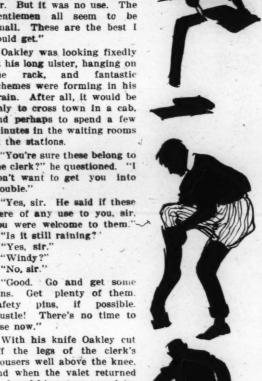

"Yes, sir." "Windy?

"No, sir."

"Good. Go and get some pins. Get plenty of them. Safety pins, if possible. Hustle! There's no time to lose now."

With his knife Oakley cut off the legs of the clerk's trousers well above the knee. and when the valet returned he found his patron completely dressed in the coat and waistcoat of his business suit

"Here we are," said Oak-

Good! Now the other one. * So! Now give me that ulster. Button it down the back there as far as you can. You might pin it, so it won't flap apart. I shan't want to walk much.

* * There! That covers perfectly, doesn't it?"

Standing in the long, heavy storm coat, closely but-tened, only a few inches of the trousers bottoms showing beneath it, there was nothing in his appearance to suggest that his attire was not wholly conventional

"Yes, sir. That'll be all right, if you're very

"Oh, I'll be careful! Don't you worry about that. He handed the man a generous tip. "Tell the clerk I'll see him later, and have a cab ready smiling back at Alice as the cab started for the Twenty-third street ferry.

Mrs. Haslett's train was on time, and Oakley was glad to find that, although he had met her only twice, he recognized her immediately. She came toward him, erect, alert, smiling and protesting that it was an imposition to bring anyone across the river on such a night, to which he naturally responded that he found it only a pleasure. She added that she would have forbidden Mr. Haslett to make the arrangement, if, aside from the pleasure of being met and cared for, she had not wished to renew and extend her acquaintance with Mr. Oakley, of whom she had recently heard her husband speak so often and so pleasantly. Remembering Mr. Haslett's confidence in his wife's judgment of men, Oakley hitched his ulster closer about his knees and mentally congratulated himself that he had not let this chance escape him, while Alice's face smiled approval from the background of his thoughts.

From this auspicious beginning the conversation proceeded delightfully, his own ease and pleasure in it convincing Oakley that he was making the good impression he desired. Mrs. Haslett's information and interests were wide, her perceptions keen, and she had the tact born of extensive social experience. He knew that she was skillfully drawing him out, and he knew also that he was giving her his excellent best in response. Nevertheless, he was entirely unprepared for the next move in the game.

When they had almost reached the New York side he glanced at his watch between phrases, and paren-thetically assured her that they had amply time to get across town before the departure of her train for Stam-

"I hope meeting me has not disarranged your plans?" she tentatively inquired.

"On the contrary, it gave the evening a purpose, which it had otherwise lacked.'

"But-of course you have dined?" "Not yet."

'Really?' Her face brightened. "Then I have less hesitation about exercising the privilege conferred by white hair and asking you to take me somewhere to dinner. Will you?"

"Why, of course-I shall be delighted," stammered he, instinctively wrapping closer the enfolding skirts of the ulster; "but-but your train?"

"Well, that's part of it-though a small part. Perhaps Mr. Haslett told you I am on my way to Boston, where I must be tomorrow; but, because I couldn't leave Baltimore until late this afternoon and didn't care to spend the night in New York, I decided to go on to my sister's in Stamford, taking an early train from there in the morning. On the way up it occurred to me that if I cared to stay in New York this evening I might simplify matters somewhat by taking the midnight train, which would give me a fair night's sleep and enable me to reach Boston early in the morn-I resolved not to suggest this, however, unless ing. you were disengaged, and-well, frankly, unless we got on well. I'm a very selfish old person, and I like to be entertained. But if you have other plans," quick glance read his face, which he was unable entirely to control, "you must not let me interfere with them in the least."

A faint gleam of hope was instantly extinguished. "No! Oh, no!" he said, trying to force cordiality into his tone, while his mind seethed in an effort to arrive at a quick solution. "I have no other plans at all. I told Mr. Haslett that my evening was entirely free. It is very good of you to give me this oppor-tunity. It's a great pleasure, I assure you—and an honor. Of course," another gleam of hope, "you will let me take you first to a hotel."

'Oh, that won't be necessary," she replied. "I suggest that we drive to the Grand Central, engage my berth, leave my bag, telegraph to my sister, and then go directly to dinner. Why not?"
"But—I fear you may be overtired. Mr. Haslett telephoned that you had not been well, and"laugh interrupted him.

"Did he? How like Warren! I had two days of headache last week, and in consequence he'll insist upon coddling me for a month. I am perfectly well, and really quite eager for our gay little adventure. Let's lose no time.

CHAPTER VII.

TEA IN THE SCHOOLROOM

A EA at the palace, until the old King had taken to his bed, had been the one cheerful hour of the day. The entire suite gathered in one of the salons, and remained standing until the King's entrance. After that, formality ceased. Groups formed, footmen in plush, with white wigs, passed trays of cakes and sandwiches and tiny gilt cups of exquisite tea. The court, so to speak, removed its white gloves, and was noisy and informal. True, at dinner again ceremony and etiquette would reign. The march into the dining hall between rows of bowing servants, led by the King, the long, tedious courses, the careful watch for precedence—that was dinner at

But now all that was changed. The King did not leave his apartment. Annunciata occasionally took tea with the suite, but, glad for an excuse, left the court to dine without her. Sometimes, for a half-hour, she leat her royal if somewhat indifferently attired presence to the salon afterward, where for 30 minutes or so she moved from group to group, exchanging a few more or less gracious words. But such times The Archduchess, according to court gossip, had "slumped."

To Hedwig the change had been a relief. The entourage, with its gossip, its small talk, its liaisons, excited in her only indifference and occasional loathing. Not that her short life had been without its af-She was too lovely for that. But they had touched her only faintly.

On the day of the Chancellor's visit to her mother she went to tea in the schoolroom. She came in glowing from a walk, with the jacket of her dark vel-Yet suit thrown open, and a bunch of lilies-of-the-valley tucked in her belt.

Tea had already come, and Capt. Larisch, holding his cup, was standing by the table. The Crown Prince, who was allowed only one.cup, was having a second of hot water and milk, equal parts, and sweetened. Hedwig slipped out of her jacket and drew off her gloves. She had hardly glanced at Nikky, although she knew quite well every motion he had made since she entered. "I am famished!" she said, and proceeded to eat very little and barely touch the tea. 'Please don't go, Miss Braithwaite. And now, how is everything?

Followed a long half-hour, in which the Crown Prince talked mostly of the Land of Desire and the American boy. Miss Braithwaite, much indulged by long years of service, crocheted, and Nikky Larisch.

the embrasure of a window, watched the little group. In reality he watched Hedwig, all his humble, boyish heart in his eyes.

After a time Hedwig slipped the lilies out of her belt and placed them in a glass of water.

"They are thirsty, poor things," she said to Otto. Only-and here was a strange thing, if she were really sorry for them—one of the stalks fell to the floor, and she did not trouble to pick it up. Nikky retrieved it, and pretended to place it with the others. But in reality he had palmed it quite neatly, and a little later he pocketed it. Still later, he placed it in his prayer book.

The tea table became rather noisy. The room echoed with laughter. Even Miss Braithwaite was compelled to wipe her eyes over some of Nikky's sallies, and the Crown Prince was left quite gasping. Nikky was really in his best form, being most unreason-ably happy, and Hedwig, looking er than in her boyish ridir clothes-Hedwig was fairly palpitating with excitement.

Nikky was a born mimic. First, he by one. Then, in an instant, he was Napoleon, which was easy, of course; and the next second, with one of the fur tails which had come unfastened from Hedwig's muff, he had become a pirate, with the tail for a great moustache. One of the very best things he did, however, was to make a widow's cap out of a tea napkin, and surmount it with tiny coronet, which was really Hedwig's bracelet. He put it on, drew down his upper lip and puffed his cheeks, and there was Queen Victoria of England to the life.

Hedwig was so delighted with this that she made him sit down and draped one of Miss Braithwaite's shawls about his shoulders. It was difficult to look like Queen Victoria under the circumstances, with her small hands deftly draping and smoothing. But Nikky did very well.

It was just as Hedwig was tucking the shawl about his neck to hide the collar of his tunic, and Miss Braithwaite was looking a trifle offended, because she considered the memory of Queen Victoria not to be trifled with, and just as Nikky took a fresh breath and puffed out his cheeks again, that the Archduchess came in.

She entered unannounced, save by the jingle of chains, and surveyed the room with a single furious glance. Queen Victoria's cheeks collapsed and the coronet slid slightly to one side. Then Nikky rose and jerked off the shawl and bowed. Everyone looked rather frightened, except the Crown Prince. In a sort of horrible silence he advanced and kissed Annunciata's hand.

"So this is what you are doing," observed her royal highness to Hedwig. "In this—this undignified manner you spend your time!"

"It is very innocent fun, mother."

For that matter, there was nothing very dignified in the scene that followed. The Archduchess dis-missed the governess and the Crown Prince, quite as if he had been an ordinary child, and naughty at that. Miss Braithwaite looked truculent. After all, the heir to the throne is the heir to the throne and should have the privilege of his own study. But Hedwig gave her an appealing glance, and she went out, closing the door with what came dangerously near being a slam.

The Archduchess surveyed the two remaining cul-prits with a terrible gaze. "Now," she said, "how long have these ridiculous performances been going "Mother!" said Hedwig. 'Answer me."

"The question is absurd. There was no harm in what we were doing. It amused O.to. He has few enough pleasures. Thanks to all of us, he is very

"And since when have you assumed the responsibility of his upbringing?"

"I remember my own dreary childhood," said Hed-

The Archduchess turned on her furiously. and more," she said, "as you grow up, Hedwig, you remind me of your unfortunate father. You have the same lack of dignity, the same—she glanced at Nikky -- "the same common tastes, the same habit of choosing strange society, of forgetting your rank."

Hedwig was scarlet, but Nikky had gone pale. for the Archduchess, her cameos were rising and fall-ing stormily. With hands that shook, Hedwig picked up her jacket and hat. Then she moved toward the

"Perhaps you are right, mother," she said, "but I hope I shall never have the bad taste to speak ill of the dead." Then she went out.

The scene between the Archduchess and Nikky began in a storm and ended in a sort of hopeless quiet.

Miss Braithwaite had withdrawn to her sitting room. but even there she could hear the voice of Annunciata, rasping and angry.

It was very clear to Nikky from the beginning that the Archduchess' wrath was not for that afternoon alone. And in his guilty young mind rose various memories, all infinitely dear, all infinitely, incredibly reckless—other frolics around the tea table, rides in the park, lessons in the riding school. Very soon he was confessing them all, in reply to sharp questions. When the tablet of his sins was finally uncovered, the Archduchess was less angry and great deal more anxious. Hedwig free was a problem. Hedwig in love with this dashing boy was a greater one.
"Of one thing I must assure your highness," said

Nikky. "There—these meetings have been of my seeking."

'The Princess requires no defense, Capt. Larisch." That put him back where he belonged, and Annunciata did a little thinking, while Nikky went on, in his troubled way, running his fingers through his hair until he looked rather like an uneasy but ardent-eved porcupine. He acknowledged that these meetings had meant much to him, everything to him, he would confess, but he had never dared to hope. He had always thought of her royal highness as the granddaughter of his King. He had never spoken a word that he need regret. Annunciata listened, and took his measure shrewdly. He was the sort of young fool, she told herself, who would sacrifice himself and crucify his happiness for his country. It was on just such shoulders as his that the throne was upheld. His loyalty was more to be counted on than his heart.

She changed her tactics adroitly, sat down, even softened her voice. "I have been emphatic, Capt. Larisch," she said. "because, as I think you know, things are not going too well with us. To help the situation, certain plans are being made. I will be more explicit. A marriage is planned for the Princess Hedwig, which will assist us all. It is" -she hesitated imperceptibly-"the King's dearest wish."

Horrer froze on Nikky's face. But he bowed.

"After what you have told me, I shall ask your co-operation," said Annunciata smoothly. "While there are some of us who deplore the necessity, still it exists. And an alliance with Kar-

"Karnia!" cried Nikky, violating all ceremonial, of course. "But surely"

The Archduchess rose and drew herself to her full height. "I have given you confidence for confidence, Capt. Larisch," she said coldly. "The Princess Hedwig has not yet been told. We shall be glad of your assistance when that time comes. It is possible that it will not come. In case it does, we shall count on you."

Nikky bowed deeply as she went out. bowed, with death in his eyes.

And thus it happened that Cant.

How to reduce them

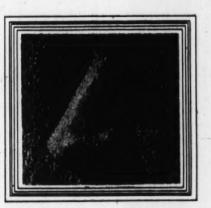

Complexions otherwise flawless are often ruined by conspicuous nose pores.

In such cases the small muscular fibres of the nose have become weakened and do not keep the pores closed as they should be. Instead, these pores collect dirt, clog up and become enlarged.

To reduce enlarged nose pores: wring a cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for thirty seconds with a lump of ice.

Do not expect to change in a week a condition resulting from years of neglect. Use this treatment persistently. It will gradually reduce the enlarged pores until they are inconspicuous.
